Bradford to Ease Bill Before Vote

With his proposed $59,000,000 tax plan, particularly the sales tax aspect of it, facing certain defeat, Gov. Bradford today started marshalling his forces to make a final study of the bill before it is voted upon by the House next week.

Although close observers say the Governor is determined to see the tax plan pushed through in spite of the vigorous opposition voiced at public hearings held before the committee on taxation for the past seven days, others felt that he may overhaul certain unpopular phases of the program within the next few days.

The fact that the Democratic House members are already working on an alternate tax program which will be ready by next week may influence Bradford to hold back on his program until the Democrats produce their substitute measure, it was reported.

House Minority Leader Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., of Cambridge, first revealed that his party members were working on an alternate proposal at the final hearing held on the plan.

O'Neill, refusing to divulge the contents of the Democratic plan, said Democratic members of the House had agreed to oppose the sales tax provision of the Bradford $59,000,000 tax program and was now working on an alternative.

Earlier in the hearing which ended with only four spectators in the hall, George F. Markham, legislative counsel for the Fur and Leather Workers' Union, charged the Legislature had "kicked out millions of dollars in additional revenue by rejecting proposals for additional taxation on horse and dog racing."

Referring to the recent vote for increasing taxes on horse and dog racing, Markham declared:

"Let some of the legislators who express great concern for the people's welfare explain their vote on that issue. The Legislature's response to the high pressure lobby of the selfish racing interests places the General Court in a very embarrassing situation, to say the least, when it comes to considering a levy on the working people."

Norman J. Randall, of the Northeast Development Council in Essex County which instigated the Newburyport price cut plan, asserted he was "astounded and surprised at the Governor's illogical action."

For the first time since its founding in 1881 the Boston Post Office Clerks Ass'n appeared in protest of a measure, John Beretury, representing the group, told the committee as he placed his organization on record against the sales tax.

"If you gentlemen don't take the gun of taxation out of the Governor's hands, he'll blow his head off politically and take a lot of his friends with him," said Harry J. Dowd, head of the Boston Executives Ass'n.

Pointing out that perhaps 90 per cent of the membership of his association voted GOP last fall, Dowd left no doubt as to what their sentiments would be at the next election if the tax goes through.

"This sales tax will leave the field wide open for some smart leader of the opposition party to mobilize public opinion when the proper time comes," he said. "I predict here today that if Gov. Bradford and many of you Republicans don't take heed in this matter you will all pay the penalty of the reprisals of the people."

$10,000 Blaze In Chelsea School

Damage caused by fire last night to the Carter Junior High School, Carter st., Chelsea, was estimated at $10,000 today.

Supt. of Schools Frank Herlihy and Head Master William J. Kennedy announced there would be no school Monday but that quick repairs would be made to permit High School classes to resume Tuesday. Three lower grades—4, 5 and 6—will be temporarily transferred to the Williams School.

Inspectors are still probing the cause for the blaze, during which a fireman, Dept. Chief John Lohan, was injured.

$25,000 Waterfront Fire Wrecks GI Plant

A GI frozen foods business carefully nursed through a seven-weeks strike of Quincy Cold Storage Warehouse employees took another body blow today when fire racing through the five-story granite Lewis Wharf building, Atlantic ave., destroyed thousands of dollars in food and equipment.

The business, known as New England Frozen Food Distributors, Inc., was operated by three West Roxbury brothers, John, Francis and Gerard Tully. Though not struck themselves, pickets thrown around the Market warehouse prevented the brothers from carrying on business as usual until Thursday.

Three alarms were sounded before the blaze was extinguished with total damage estimated at $25,000. Other occupants of the building are Hercules Kales Co., soap and scouring powder manufacturers, and the General Warehouse Co.

Slate falling 75 feet from the roof constantly endangered firemen clustered on the wharf and on a railroad siding behind the building.

Ten firemen who climbed ladders and entered the top-floor storerooms were coated with lamp blacking and zinc oxides when powerful streams from hoses ripped open bags of supplies. They were assisted by other firemen down the ladders to the street.

The fire, of undetermined origin, is believed to have started on the top floor.

Handle Off Russ' Car Before He Bought It

By TOM RILEY and JAMES J. DELANEY

PLYMOUTH, May 24—The defense of Charles Russell Goodale, on trial for the sex-slaying of Ruth McGurk, opened in Superior Court today by parading nine witnesses to the stand to emphasize four major points to Judge Lewis Goldberg and the jury. Through the testimony of five women and four men, the defense brought out that:

1—The inner right-hand door handle of Goodale's car, which the Commonwealth charged he removed so he could make advances when he parked with girls, was off the door when he bought the auto a month before Ruth McGurk vanished.

2—A girl, dressed like and answering the description of Ruth, was seen with a youth, dressed all in white "who didn't resemble the defendant at all," in front of the Colonial Casino at 10:40 p. m. last July 27, the night the Cambridge girl disappeared.

3—Helen Leary and Ruth Jefferson, the slain girl's two vacation chums, viewed a suspect other than Goodale and were quoted as saying they "thought but were not sure," after considerable deliberation that he was Ruth's dance hall companion.

4—A girl and her escort, who sat in the booth at the King Midas diner where the State contended Goodale was seated with Ruth McGurk that night, each were served a rye highball.

Mrs. Anna Topoulos Hatzis, of High st., Brockton, a bride of one month, testified she was summing in Onset last July. The night of the 27th, at about 10:40 p. m., she was standing with a girl friend, Claire Schindler, of Jones ave., Dorchester, in front of the cocktail lounge and near a soft drink stand on the first floor of the Onset dance hall building.

She said she noticed a couple, a girl in a pink gabardine dress, coatless with long dark brown hair, slightly curly, standing with a youth clad all in white.

The witness said she paid particular attention to the dress because she wished to buy one of the same type and that she stood and admired it.

The girl's companion, she said, had black hair, combed straight back. He was thin and had a long face, which wasn't round, she added. She said he was dressed in white trousers and white sport shirt, open at the neck.

The young bride said when she heard of the discovery of Ruth's body and saw pictures of Miss McGurk and Goodale in the newspapers, she wrote a letter on Aug. 8 to Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing.

She said she was questioned by Asst. Dist. Atty. Robert G. Clark at the Wareham station the next day and was shown pictures of girls and picked one girl out of a group photograph.

She said she wasn't told which of the pictures were photographs of the McGurk girl.

The witness added that she never saw Goodale until last Thursday, Defense Atty. Herbert F. Callahan asked Goodale to stand up in the prisoner's dock and instructed the witness to tell the court if he was the man she had seen outside the Casino. Mrs. Hatzis said:

"He doesn't resemble him at all."

Cross-examined by Dewing, Mrs. Hatzis admitted she told Asst. Dist. Atty. Clark earlier that the hair of the girl she saw was "black and straight down."

CLAIRE SCHINDLER
Was With Mrs. Hatzis

The slain girl was auburn-haired.

Miss Schindler followed the Brockton bride to the stand but testified she had walked ahead of her friend and had less opportunity to see the girl in pink and the youth in white outside the Casino.

The testimony that the Jeffersons and Leary girls hesitated in identifying another suspect as Ruth's dance hall companion was given by Wareham Patrolman Richard Hogan.

Hogan also testified that it wasn't until this trial started that he had heard the two girls' description of Ruth's escort as a "boy from Onset."

Mrs. Edna Ellis, waitress at the King Midas, testified she served rye highballs to a youth and girl

Goodale Not Man She Saw With Girl Resembling Ruth

PLYMOUTH, May 24—The first Saturday session and the 11th day of the Goodale murder trial got under way in superior court today with the defense opening by Atty. Herbert F. Callahan.

MRS. PHYLLIS FISHER (Direct Examination)

First witness for the defense—Mrs. Phyllis Fisher of Wareham.

Q—Mrs. Fisher you are married. A—Yes.

Q—Have you a family. A—Yes, one son.

Q—At some time was a Ford sedan owned by you and your husband. A—Yes.

Q—Was it registered in your name. A—Yes.

Q—Mrs. Fisher, I show you Exhibit 14 (picture of Goodale car) and ask you to look at it. Does it look like the auto you owned. A—Yes.

Q—I show you Exhibit 13 (another picture of Goodale car), does it look like the car that you owned. A—Yes.

Q—When did you own this car. A—In May 1946.

Q—Do you recall selling the car. A—Yes.

Q—When. A—About a month later. I don't remember the exact date.

Q—You took care of the sale of c.r. A—Yes.

Q—While you had the car, you made use of it. A—Yes, but I did not drive it.

Q—Your husband drove it. A—Yes.

Q—You say you sold the car. A—Yes.

Q—To whom did you sell it. A—Mr. Goodale.

Q—You mean Charles Russell Goodale. A—Yes.

No question by Dewing.

RICHARD R. FISHER (Direct Examination)

Next witness was Richard R. Fisher.

Q—Where do you live. A—Hathaway Beach, Wareham.

Q—Are you married. A—Yes.

Q—What does your family consist of. A—A wife and one child.

Q—What do you do. A—I am a truck driver.

Q—Do you have a place of business. A—No.

Q—You some time owned a Ford sedan. A—Yes.

Callahan then took a picture from among the exhibits in the case.

Q—I ask you to look at Exhibit 13 and 14 and tell if that is a picture of the Ford sedan that you owned. A—Yes, it is.

Q—Will you tell us when you first purchased that Ford sedan. A—I first purchased it in May, 1946.

Q—From whom. A—From Harold Campbell, a truck driver that works for the same company that I work for.

Q—Where do you work. A—At the Globe Transportation Co. in Wareham.

Q—Do you know where Campbell purchased it. A—He only had it a couple of days before I bought it from him.

Q—Do you know whom he bought it from. A—He bought it from (the witness said a name that sounded like Kemp).

Q—How long did you have the car. A—A little more than a month.

Q—During that month did you use the car at all. A—Some.

Q—What did you use it for. A—Transportation to and from work.

Q—Did you use it every day. A—No, I didn't.

There were then a series of objections to questions attempting to show that the witness had repairs done on the car.

Callahan called opposing counsel and went up to the bench for a conference.

Callahan resumed.

Q—Will you explain to His Honor and the jury what the condition of the inside of the car was when you bought it from Mr. Campbell. A—The condition of the inside was poor. The upholstery was torn. The handle was off the right-hand door. The window was cracked, too.

Q—What was the condition of the back seat. A—It did have a back seat.

Q—Did you do anything regarding a back seat. A—I took it out.

Q—What did you put into it in place of a back seat, if anything. A—A light blanket.

Callahan searched through the exhibit carton identified as having been in custody of the State chemist.

Q—I show you Exhibit 42, Mr. Fisher, blanket and ask you to look at that blanket.

(The witness takes the blanket and examines it). Is that the blanket you put in the back of the car. A—(Holding the blanket up). Yes, it is, except when I put it in there were no patches on it.

Q—Will you exhibit for His Honor and the jury just how you attached that blanket to the rear. A—I was under the rear window,

Providence Cops In Girl Scandals To Appeal Ouster

PROVIDENCE, May 24—A legal battle over dismissal of 13 policemen following a probe of petting parties and revelry in Roger Williams Park loomed today.

Spokesmen for the ousted officers said they will appeal to the Superior Court a ruling of the board of fire and police which ordered their immediate ouster on charges of immoral conduct and neglect of duty.

No court action, it was reported, is contemplated against the four girls who were interrogated about rides in police cars in the early morning hours and escapades in an unused barn in the park. The oldest of the girls is now in her early 20's, and the alleged misconduct extended over a two-year period, it was reported.

State Sen. William B. Sweeney, defense counsel for the entire group, announced that Patrolmen Mario DiCecco and Girard E. Fournier were not found guilty of immoral conduct. The board's announcement did not specify on what counts the officers were found guilty.

The dismissed officers besides DiCecco and Fournier are: Clarence M. Mitchell, Albert E. Holt, Jr.; Evril J. Carlson, Thomas D. Lepre, Joseph D. Altruda, William H. Fogarty, Louis Capabianzo, Joseph Mazilli, Rinaldo Manocchia, John J. Regan and Joseph Revello.

Another officer, Mariano Bairros, not connected with the other 13, but charged with parking in a squad car with a woman while on duty, resigned last April.

The scandal broke last March after it had been reported to Chief James E. Murray that women were seen with officers in parked squad cars.

After investigation, Chief Murray announced the officers involved had been suspended pending hearings.

Mormon Crickets Peril Oregon Crops

ORDNANCE, Ore., May 24 (AP)—Pushed back by a relentless advance of Mormon crickets, farmers attempted to establish a new "extermination" line today just three miles from the green gardens and farm fields of this lush eastern Oregon town.

The crickets, emerging from the dry sagebrush country surrounding the rich Umatilla river farmlands, crawled and hopped through a poison bait line established four miles from here.

Farm crews began laying a new line of bait in an attempt to prevent the bugs from reaching Ordinance and Hermiston.

The insects, which cover a 500-square-mile area, have been advancing on a 12-mile front.

Jeans Like Those Missing Paula Welden Wore Found

BENNINGTON, Vt., May 24—Picked searchers plunged into the rain-soaked wilderness surrounding Bald Mountain shortly after daybreak today in a last-ditch effort to solve the mysterious disappearance six months ago of Paula Welden, blonde Bennington College student.

The searching party of 200 was divided into 10 groups, operating under a carefully prepared plan based on the theory that the 18-year-old sophomore perished in a snowstorm last Dec. 1 while taking a short cut back to the campus.

In the quiet of her room at the Hotel Putnam here, Mrs. Jean Welden waited with a handful of friends from her home city of Stamford, Ct., for word that the wooded slopes had given up her daughter's body.

Earlier, she had knelt in prayer with her other two daughters, Pamela, 17, and Stephanie, 15, asking that this final search end the uncertainty that has hung over the family since the Sunday afternoon when Paula walked off the campus for a hike along Long Trail.

The two girls joined their father, W. Archibald Welden, and reported to officials directing the day's search. The sisters were assigned to a group of 10 Bennington College girls picked from students anxious to join the search for their missing schoolmate.

Mrs. Welden made her first trip to Bennington since the search began in order to be near her husband and comfort him in the event either that the search discloses the girl's body or ends tomorrow night with still no clue authorities had given up formal search, was at the side of Sheriff John H. Maloney when the parties set out today.

The 10 groups were told, in a meeting at the State Armory, that if today's day-long hunt is fruitless, a still larger area will be scanned tomorrow by the same units.

Today's coverage of a 24-mile area has been mapped out as a military operation calling for a "saturation effort" in the most likely section the girl could have wandered into to become hopelessly lost. It was not thoroughly explored last December before heavy snows ended the earlier hunt.

Sheriff Maloney, a former Army infantryman who saw service in Europe, outlined how the search has been planned to conform with Army tactics.

He directed the 10 groups from a "command post" set up on Long Trail in a private cottage near the Fay Fuller cabin. Four telephones manned by aides kept him in touch with his office in town and salient points.

Each searcher was given a small map showing the section his group has been detailed to cover. Each group was assigned a "walkie talkie" radio set borrowed from Co. C, 172nd Infantry, Vermont National Guard.

Three veteran woodsmen were put in charge of each group of 15-odd searchers, and one group of members was named "runner" to bring back to the search headquarters any information of value in the event radio contact fails.

A Civil Air Patrol plane piloted by William Frietag took off from Bennington Airport. It can be contacted by radio from the control tower and sent to investigate any area at the request of a group leader.

Chelsea, Roxbury Women Savagely Beaten, Robbed

Two young thugs, one in Chelsea, the other in Roxbury, savagely slugged women pedestrians in early morning holdups, sending to the hospital 61-year-old Mrs. Alice Hennessey, Library st., Chelsea, who was beaten with a gun butt, and Mrs. Mary Curry, 42, of Fountain st., Roxbury, who was choked unconscious in a vacant lot near her home.

SCHOLAR — Attractive Amy M. Hoey, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew T. Hoey, 750 Saratoga st., East Boston, has been awarded a full scholarship to Emmanuel College. She is a member of the graduating class of Fitton High School in East Boston.

Mrs. Hennessey, whose eyes were blackened by the gun wielder, managed to hold her handbag containing $17 although she was knocked down. Her companion, Ella Thistle, 17, also of Library st., lost $10 when the attacker snatched her bag.

The elderly woman was treated at Chelsea Memorial Hospital, then released. She and Miss Thistle described the youth as being dark, with black hair, apparently in his 20's.

In the Roxbury thuggery, the holdup man slugged Mrs. Curry from behind, dragged her into the vacant lot, choked her until she lost consciousness and robbed her of a small amount of money.

Her moans later brought help from passersby. She was removed to City Hospital with a possibly fractured skull, concussion, broken nose and deep cuts on face and neck. The experience left her unable to describe her assailant.

This Baby's Life Should Be Hardy

Mrs. Alice L. Seier, 27, of Winter st., Lexington, roused her husband, John, at 3 a. m. today and told him their expected baby would join the family any minute.

Seier and her brother, William M. Sharkey, bundled Mrs. Seier into an auto and headed for the Boston Lying-In Hospital. The headlights failed and they hit a tree.

Mrs. Seier was hurled against the windshield, suffering facial cuts. Her husband and brother took her to the office of Dr. Lawrence L. Pious for first aid, then to the fire station, where she was placed in an ambulance and the trip resumed.

Junior arrived a few minutes after his mother reached the hospital, 7½ pounds, healthy and in excellent voice. Mother is doing well, too.

MANILA PLANE UNTRACED

MANILA, May 24 (AP)—No trace has been found of the Philippine army plane, Lily Marlene, missing since Sunday with a passenger list of at least 11 prominent government officials.

The unscrupulous methods were revealed as the Senate small business subcommittee was asked to investigate a report that executives of "five big steel mills" allegedly made arrangements to split $18,000,000 gained through racketeering in steel.

An official of the Jones and Laughlin Steel Co., who asked that his name be withheld, said steel warehousemen and fabricators were among the most prominent offenders.

Other steel makers denied connection with the gray market and said they had shut off several customers after an investigation proved they were diverting part of their steel consignments to the gray market.

However, they admitted they might have been victims of circumstances and unknowingly sold steel to the racketeers.

The J. & L. official said warehousemen diverted part of their regular consignment into the gray market, adding that fabricators whose production lagged because of a lack of other necessities, sold back-logs of steel, many falling into the hands of racket operators.

He said only small quantities of steel are on the gray market, usually not more than 100 tons at a time.

The official added: "When they are talking in thousands of tons, they're not talking sales. They're talking of offers. Most of the men selling steel in the gray market are ignorant of the steel industry."

There was a boiler works started in St. Louis early this year, the steel executive said, ostensibly to manufacture boilers. It had four persons on the payroll.

It obtained steel which was immediately reconsigned on the gray market without unloading it from the cars.

Arlington Vet Shot By Maine Farmer

YORK BEACH, Me., May 24—Richard P. Clifford, 22, Arlington, Mass., infantry veteran, has a bullet wound in the shoulder today because an unidentified farmer believes in shooting first and asking questions later.

According to Clifford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Connor, Alfred rd., Arlington, he knocked at a farmhouse to ask directions on his way to the Cliff House, where he is employed. Clifford told Connor by phone he was greeted with a .22-caliber bullet.

The wound was said not to be serious.

Clifford, who served with the 45th Infantry for three years, has been employed at the hotel for three weeks.

Pneumonia Claims Kin of King George

LONDON, May 24 (INS)—Henry George Charles Lascelles, 64, sixth Earl of Harewood and brother-in-law of King George VI of England, died today at baronial Harewood House in Leeds. Death followed an attack of pneumonia.

His marriage in 1922 to the princess royal—Mary, sister of King George—was one of Britain's most notable social events in the era just after World War I.

The princess royal and other members of the immediate family were at his bedside when death came.

News was sent immediately to the King and Queen, who were spending the weekend at Windsor, and to Queen-Mother Mary at Marlborough House in London.

The Duke of Windsor also was notified, and he telephoned condolences to his widowed sister. This is the first time since his abdication that the Duke of Windsor has been in England at a moment of family bereavement.

Gossips are wondering whether the common bond of sorrow may heal the stubborn breach that still separates the Duke from some of the more adamant members of his family.

Head Pierced by Steel Rod, Man Ok'd by Hospital

NEW YORK, May 24 (AP)—George Dueller, 22, shipping clerk whose head was pierced by a steel rod two weeks ago as he stood talking to a friend on the street, left Bellevue Hospital today "feeling fine, except for a slight headache." He will report to the hospital every two or three weeks for treatments, he said, and in about three months, a steel plate will be inserted in his head.

Five inches of the 36-inch steel welding rod entered Dueller's head. The part remaining outside was clipped off by police and the remainder was removed by an operation.

Sheriff J. C. Stephenson said he thought he had a witness who would testify Bush was not lynched.

He requested Solicitor Tyler to accompany him to re-examine the witness, identified as a woman.

A few minutes before the solicitor made his statement he conferred with several FBI agents.

One agent, R. A. Allen, hurriedly left the conference and no one would say where he had gone.

"We worked all night," said a weary State Bureau of Investigation agent who would not be quoted by name, "and we are not so sure there has been a lynching."

A half dozen other officers nodded agreement. None would offer a theory as to what had happened to the suspect but there were rumors he had escaped from his captors.

2 Held in Assault On Policeman

Two South Boston men, John Gately and Walter Yarosh, neighbors on Emerson st., were held in $1000 bail today in South Boston District Court for assault and battery on a police officer.

Judge Leary set June 3 for a hearing after police testified Patrolman Walker Yarosh, Cummings Highway, Roslindale, is still in Boston City Hospital after receiving injuries while attempting to arrest Lawless for drunkenness at East Broadway and K st.

Gately is charged with larceny of the officer's club, attempt to rescue a prisoner and assault on Yarosh. Lawless is charged with assault. Police said a group of men joined the fray and that the patrolman had been beaten and kicked.

Garbo to Accept Oil Legacy Left Her by Secret Admirer

NEW YORK, May 24 (INS)—Greta Garbo is disclosed to have decided to accept the legacy left her recently by a Michigan recluse who will her all his possessions.

The estate left the Swedish-born film star by Edgar Donne, who died last October in his hermit-like shack near the village of Dorr, Mich., originally was estimated at $20,000.

Today, however, a spokesman for Miss Garbo's attorney, said the estate is "very small" and nothing approaching $20,000, although Michigan reports spoke of "oil lands" as being included in the estate.

The attorney said while Miss Garbo has decided to accept the bequest from her strange admirer, she has not yet made up her mind what to do with the proceeds, though "in all probability she will give it to various charities."

Donne, British-born, went to Hollywood in 1936 to see the actress, but so far as is known was unable to meet her.

It was said for years the recluse lavished a long-distance affection on the screen star and hoped to marry her.

As a first move in collecting the bequest for Miss Garbo, her New York law firm has ordered the estate liquidated. It includes a 160-acre land tract reported to be rich in oil reserves.

The administratrix of the estate, Mrs. Marguerite Lee Luna, said at Allegan, Mich., that she has had offers from oil development companies to lease the land.

A call for police was answered by Daniel's father, who was in a patrol car with Patrolman Daniel Crowder. He rushed his daughter to Faulkner Hospital, where doctors said the child was only shaken up.

2 Danvers Aides Fined For Giving Patient Drink

SALEM, May 24 (AP)—Two nurses at Danvers State Mental Hospital were convicted today on charges of giving an alcoholic beverage to a patient in a public institution. Both pleaded innocent.

Ralph R. Knowles, 45, formerly of Lynn, was fined $50 and Okey C. Lively, 26, formerly of Beechford, Va., was fined $25 in district court. State Police said the men entertained a woman patient at a cafe in near-by Middleton.

Moore Given Life for 2d Degree Killing

Ten minutes after a Middlesex Superior Court jury had brought in a verdict of second-degree murder shortly after midnight, Francis H. Moore, 19, Ashland was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Paul G. Kirk.

The court denied the request of Defense Atty. Benjamin Chesky for a stay of sentence pending an appeal to the Supreme Court but said it would entertain such a motion later.

Moore was found guilty of murdering William A. McCormack, 66, night watchman in a Framingham diner.

Moore, a tall blond youth, immaculately dressed, appeared unmoved by the verdict but his widowed mother, Mildred, and an 18-year-old sister of the same name, were hysterical and had to be assisted from the courtroom.

Before the jury retired Moore was asked by Judge Kirk if he had any statement to make. He steadfastly denied any implication in the murder and said: "I have testified truthfully under oath and if I am found guilty and sent to the electric chair for this murder it is for something I did not do."

McCormack was found dead in a shack in a rear room of Ken's Diner on the Worcester Turnpike Jan. 18 after an attempted robbery had been made.

Teen-Agers Quit Theater Picketing

HAWLEY, Minn., May 24 (AP)—Teen-agers protesting admission prices at Hawley's only movie house tonight withdrew their picket lines after warnings from officials, but a spokesman said "That doesn't mean we've gone back to the ticket line."

Stern charges of "illegal boycott" and "un-Americanism" by county and town officials preceded withdrawal of pickets at the Garrick Theater.

Mayor E. P. Johnson told high school students at a special assembly their strike was "unnecessary," adding it was "un-American in the sense that it prevents a man from charging the price he desires for the product he is selling."

3 Witnesses Back Auto Handle Story

who occupied a booth there on July 27, which the State previously had established as one occupied by Goodale and a girl companion alleged by the prosecution to have been Ruth McGurk.

The last witness of the special half-day session was Lester McLean, operator of a soft drink stand under the Casino. He testified merely that the lighting was good in front of his stand at the time Mrs. Hatzis told of seeing the girl in pink and her companion in white standing there.

The inner door handle on the right side of Goodale's car was not on the door when he purchased the machine, according to the testimony of two former owners.

As the defense evidence started, Richard R. Fisher of Parkwood Beach, Wareham, testified the handle was off and in the glove compartment when he sold the car to Goodale in late June, 1946.

Edward Gomes, Wareham laborer, told Judge Lewis Goldberg and the jury that he had removed the handle from the door before he sold the car to one Harold Campbell, from whom Fisher purchased it in May, 1946.

"I took the door handle off because there was a nail in it and when I had three people riding in the car it always seemed to be sticking into someone," Gomes testified.

Gomes, Fisher and the latter's wife, Phyllis, were the first witnesses called by the defense after Atty. Herbert F. Callahan told the jury in a brief opening that he preferred not to take up their time with a formal outline of the defense evidence, but would present it forthwith on the stand.

Callahan's brief opening and the immediate presentation of defense witnesses came as a surprise. It had been expected that the defense might offer motions for a directed verdict of not guilty and also to have stricken from the record yesterday's testimony of Dr. Joseph T. Walker, State chemist, about three hairs found in the Goodale car.

Dr. Walker had testified the three hairs were "consistent with the hair of Ruth McGurk" but added that it was impossible to give as his opinion that the hairs definitely were those of the slain girl.

The door handle of the Goodale car had played an important part in the State's case. One State witness, Geraldine Wallace, Lowell nurse, had testified Goodale removed the handle while she was parked with him in his car last July 20.

It was on a charge of attempted rape of the Wallace girl that Goodale was first arrested before he was charged with the slaying of Ruth McGurk, the Cambridge summer visitor, who disappeared from the dance hall there the first night of her vacation last July 27.

Oscar Morse, a fellow cranberry bog worker with Goodale, testified for the State that Goodale "in a joking sort of way" told him he removed the door handle so he could make advances to girls.

The defense door handle witnesses were followed on the stand by Mrs. Mary C. Wilson of Tremont rd., Wareham, whose husband, William, operates the King Midas diner in Buzzards Bay.

It was in this diner that State witnesses testified Goodale was seen with a girl on the night Ruth vanished.

Mrs. Wilson testified she had known Goodale for 10 years. She said she saw him enter the diner between 11 and 11:30 that night but said she did not observe a girl with him. She said they exchanged greetings and addressed him as "Russ" and that he appeared to be in the company of several other youths.

Goodale's story of events on the murder night, whether told by himself or presented entirely by the testimony of others who saw him, was quite clearly indicated during Callahan's cross-examination of State Police Lt. John N. Sullivan, who was in charge of the murder investigation under Dist. Atty. Edmund R. Dewing.

Lt. Sullivan and others had queried Goodale after the body of the Cambridge girl was found in the Makepeace cranberry bog reservoir in Carver. Goodale was not held at that time on the murder charge, but was arraigned and released on bail on another complaint involving another case.

Callahan tried to show that the Onset young man told a detailed and frank story of his movements, and Sullivan admitted Goodale had told him most but not all of the things to which the lawyer referred.

Pieced together from Callahan's questions, the accused's alibi developed as follows:

The defendant had a couple of drinks with four Boston young men who were rooming at the Goodale house over Sunday, and

DEFENSE ATTORNEYS CALLAHAN, MCDOUGAL AND KING Arrive at Plymouth Court to Open Goodale's Defense

WHO ATE DOGS?

PLYMOUTH, May 24 — Hot dogs are to play an important part in the courtroom drama to be unfolded by Defense Counsel Herbert Callahan beginning today.

The shrewd defense attorney plans to make much of the fact that Ruth Goodale and his mysterious girl friend "Chum" ate hot dogs after leaving the Onset Casino dance hall. Yet the medical evidence showed that Ruth McGurk had not eaten hot dogs in the immediate hours preceding her death.

Then went alone to the Casino, where he met a young lady.

During the evening they went downstairs and had some beer in the cocktail bar on the ground floor of the Casino.

He dined with no other girl, and at intermission started with her for Buzzards Bay in his car, which was parked in front of his home, 200 to 300 feet from the Casino.

He took the girl to "Tiny Jim's" at Buzzards Bay and there saw and spoke to some of the waitresses. But the place was so crowded they could not find an empty booth, so they went to another eating-place and later to the King Midas restaurant.

The eating-place visited between Tiny Jim's and the King Midas was not designated by name. It has not appeared before in this trial.

The unnamed eating-place may be where Goodale claims he and his girl companion had hot dogs, as Callahan during cross-examination of Chemist Walker made it a point to bring out that no remains of frankfurters were seen in the slain girl's stomach.

If it was not at this place that they had hot dogs, then it would be in the Casino cocktail bar.

Eventually arriving at the King Midas, Goodale and the "alibi girl" were greeted by Mrs. Wilson, wife of the proprietor, and shown to a table in the cocktail lounge by Francis J. Sweeney of New Bedford, a Yale student and former schoolmate of Goodale, who was head waiter at the King Midas.

They were waited on by an elderly woman, and had highballs.

They did not leave until after the "last call" for drinks had been made, this being a Saturday night, when drink service ends at 11:45.

Driving back to Onset, he let the girl out in the center of Onset and went home.

He went into the kitchen and had some milk, and his mother called him to her bedroom. She had a severe sunburn, and he applied an ointment to her back before going to bed.

Will tell of this incident early next week.

Callahan, in questioning the state chemist later, asked if he had found any beer or alcohol in the dead girl's stomach. Walker had not, but said there had been so much decomposition he would not expect alcohol to be shown by the usual examination.

The lawyer's purpose was to show there was no alcohol, to distinguish Ruth McGurk from the girl who Goodale says drank with him. Walker, as far as the stomach was concerned, limited himself to visual observations and tests for arsenic and cyanide.

Lt. Walker could not give "an absolute" opinion as to whether or not three hairs found on articles in the back of Goodale's car were from the head of Ruth McGurk, but side the automobile hairs were "consistent" with hers.

He could find no suspicious stains of any nature in the defendant's automobile, which was examined a few days after the body was found.

Superior Court Clerk George C. P. Olson announced the State used 45 witnesses, and up to the time of the State's resting at 3:45 yesterday afternoon, 45 trial hours had been completed. This is said to be above average for speed.

The defense requested permission to postpone its start until this morning, and Judge Lewis Goldberg granted it.

3 Youths Face Quiz In Church Purse Theft

Three Hyde Park youths were questioned by police today in connection with the theft of two handbags from the basement of the First Baptist Church, Fairmount ave., Hyde Park, which their owners were practicing with the choir.

The bags belonged to Mrs. Doris Porter, 28, Arlington st., who said her bag contained $25 and her glasses, and Mrs. Betty Briscoe, 19, Newport st., whose bag held only small change. The youths, found loitering across the street from the church, gave their names to male members of the choir who turned them over to police.

Truck Knocked Over To Avoid Hitting Car

A five-ton trailer truck crashed over on its side today when Lawrence Campbell, Pearl st., Charlestown, the driver, swung sharply to avoid hitting a sedan which stopped short to prevent striking a child running across Broadway, Somerville.

Campbell was shaken up but suffered no injuries, according to Central Hospital, Somerville, doctors. Identity of the child and the sedan driver were not determined.

Son, McKellar Faints, Taken to Hospital

WASHINGTON, May 24 (AP) — Son, McKellar (D.) of Tennessee was removed from the Senate building to the Bethesda, Md., Naval Hospital today after a fainting spell.

Office aides described his illness as a "light attack, about what he has had before." It did not believe he was in serious condition.

Blanket in Car When Sold, Says Ex-Owner

from the rear back and brought down the back seat direction.

At the request of Callahan, the witness, using a picture, indicated how he had the blanket arranged in the back seat of the car, stepping from the witness stand to show it to the jury.

Q—Was there anything else in the back of the car. A—There may have been a few rags or something else like that.

Q—Was there a tire in the back of the car. A—There was tire in it but I sold him a tire.

Q—I ask you to look at Exhibit 30 and call your attention to the picture of a tire. Does that look like the tire you sold him. A—I cannot say. It was a tire like that.

Q—When you sold the car to Goodale were there any tools in it. A—No tools. No jack.

Q—Now when you took the seat out of the rear did you put anything in to replace it. A—I was going to put in a shelf, a board across the top but I took that out about a half hour before it was sold.

Q—What were the conditions of the window. A—There was a crack.

Q—Showing a photograph of the car—I ask you to point out where the window was taped. A—Exactly where it is now.

Q—Did both doors have handles. A—Not on each side. The right-hand door had no handle.

Q—Where did you carry the handle of the right-hand door. A—In the compartment.

The witness said that when he delivered the car he did not know where the handle was at the time and under questioning by Callahan brought out that when he himself purchased the car there was no handle on the right-hand door.

Q—Where was the handle then. A—In the compartment.

Q—While you used the car, did you use the handle on the right-hand door. A—No.

Callahan then produced two cleaning cloths, which were previously admitted into the case by the prosecution.

Q—Can you tell us if these cloths were in the car when you delivered it to the defendant. A—There were cloths in it, but I can't say that these are the ones.

Q—When was the car sold to. A—Charles Goodale.

Q—When did you sell the car. A—June 27 or 28. I'm not sure.

Q—What did you use the car for. A—To go to work.

Q—Did you take your family out for drives.

The witness was about to respond when Judge Goldberg, smiling, asked:

I don't see how taking his wife and child out affects this. It was his automobile. If he wanted to take them out he could."

EDWARD J. GOMES (Direct Examination)

Edward J. Gomes, of Onset, was the next witness.

Q—What do you do Mr. Gomes. A—What do you mean what do I do.

Q—What is your occupation. A—Laborer.

Q—In January and February of 1946, did you own an automobile. A—Yes.

He identified car he owned as that of Goodale's.

Q—What was condition of car. A—One of the windows was cracked.

Q—Can you tell us about the door handle on the right hand side door. A—I took it off.

Q—Why did you take it off. A—Well, it was kept on by a nail and when three of us were riding in the car the nail would stick in to someone. So I took it off.

Q—You sold the car in May. A—Yes.

Q—At time you sold car, where was the right hand door handle. A—In the compartment.

Q—When you sold it, did it have an extra tire. A—No.

Q—What was the condition of the rear of car, that is upholstery. A—It was all broken in the back. No questions by Dewing.

MARY C. WILSON (Direct Examination)

Next witness, Mary C. Wilson of 19 Tremont rd., Wareham.

Q—What is your husband's name. A—William Wilson.

Q—What is his business. A—He owns the King Midas restaurant in Buzzards Bay.

A—Yes. About 10 years.

Q—Do you at times assist there. A—Yes.

Q—Were you at King Midas the night of July 27, 1946. A—Yes.

Q—That night did you have any particular work. A—No, I was just sitting there.

Q—Tell us where you were sitting. A—In the dining room at a table near the coat room.

Q—In order to go into the cocktail lounge, from front entrance you must pass through the dining room. A—Yes.

Q—And you were seated near the entrance to cocktail lounge. A—Yes, from where I was sitting, you could see the cocktail lounge.

Q—Many patrons there that night. A—Yes, there was a crowd.

Q—Did you see the defendant Goodale at the restaurant that night. A—Yes.

Q—Can you fix the time you saw him. A—Between 11 and 11:30.

Q—Did you speak to him. A—Yes.

Q—What did he say. A—He said hello, Mrs. Wilson, and I said hello, Russ.

Q—In what direction was he headed. A—For the cocktail lounge.

Q—Were there waitresses there that night. A—Yes.

Q—Was there a waitress there working by the name of Mrs. Ellis. A—Yes, as near as I know she was.

Q—Did you make any observations as to how Goodale was dressed. A—I'd say he had a tan coat or jacket on. I paid no particular attention.

Q—How do you set the time that the defendant arrived at the King Midas as between 11 and 11:30. A—At 11:30 is the last call and I saw him come in about a half hour before that.

No questions by Dewing.

MRS. EDNA ELLIS (Direct Examination)

Mrs. Edna Ellis of Wareham was the next witness.

Q—At some time did you live in Onset. A—Yes.

Q—Did you work at the King Midas restaurant. A—Yes, last summer and two summers ago.

Q—Where do you work now. A—At Tobey Hospital, Wareham.

Q—In July of 1946 did you work in King Midas. A—Yes.

Q—Work there last July 27, 1946. A—Yes.

Q—What was your work there. A—Waiting on table.

Q—Did you have a particular station assigned you. A—Yes.

Q—How many tables did you have. A—Eight.

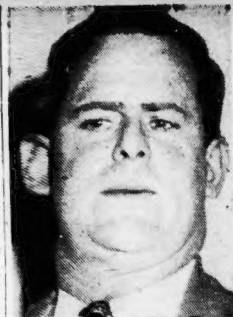

Q—That station was on the left hand side of the cocktail lounge as you entered it. A—Yes.

Q—On that station, whether there was a table for two people. A—Yes.

Q—Tell us the location of the small table for two. A—As you enter the cocktail lounge there's a booth and small table directly in back of it.

Q—Is there a side entrance there to the King Midas. A—Yes.

Q—Where is the table with reference to the side entrance. A—You go around to the back and as you go in the door there's a booth and back of it there's a small table.

OFFICER DANIEL HURLEY, DR. JOSEPH WALKER, OFFICER ALBERT TRACY
Their Testimony Ends State's Case Against Charles Russell Goodale

Q—Do you recall whether this table was occupied on Saturday, July 27. A—They were all occupied.

Q—Who was the head waiter. A—Francis Sweeney.

Q—Do you recall on Saturday, July 27, whether Sweeney seated a couple at that table. A—He seated more than one couple before the evening was over.

Q—Do you recall Sweeney seating a couple towards the end of the evening. A—Yes.

Q—Would you tell us about what time. A—Between 11:30 and a quarter to 12.

Q—Was that the last couple to use the table that night. A—Yes.

Q—Did you serve the couple anything. A—One round, two drinks.

Q—Do you recall the liquor. A—Two rye highballs.

Q—Do you recall when the couple left. A—I didn't notice, it was too crowded.

Q—Did you observe a young man in that couple. A—No.

Q—Did you observe a young lady. A—No, I didn't pay any attention.

Q—Do you recall how they were seated. A—Well, the fellow pulled the table to the side and the girl sat in facing out from the wall. The man stood and asked me if I thought I could get him a couple of drinks, and I said yes, and he said two rye highballs. I brought them back and he was still standing beside the girl.

Q—What time was this. A—About 12.

Q—Sometime after were you spoken to by the police. A—After they found the body.

The witness was turned over, at this point, to Dist. Atty. Dewing.

(Cross Examination)

Q—Do you remember if the couple you referred to were young or old. A—They were young, not old.

Showing the witness a manuscript, Dewing asked:

Q—Does this question and answer refresh your recollection. A—Yes, that is what I said before the Grand Jury.

Q—Do you recall, now, whether that couple you have referred to were old or young. A—They were young.

Q—Did you tell that to the detective that interrogated you. A—I told him I did not pay any attention.

Q—Do you recall a description of the man and woman. A—I said the girl was a little shorter than the fellow.

Q—Do you recall anything else in the way of a description besides that. A—No.

Q—I call this question and answer to your attention. Now, do you say you remember anything about a description of this man and woman. A—I remember that she was shorter.

Q—Did you tell the detectives that she was shorter. A—I do not remember.

Q—Does this question and answer, again pointing—refresh your recollection. A—No.

Q—By the way, they do not serve any food in that section where they would be. A—No.

Dewing. That will be all.

RICHARD HOGAN (Direct Examination)

Richard Hogan, a part time

Wareham policeman was next called.

Q—Sometime in the summer of 1946 you were a police officer working in Wareham police headquarters. A—Yes.

Q—Were you working as a police officer during the disappearance and death of Ruth McGurk. A—I was.

Q—I direct your attention to the week of July 29, 1946. Were you on duty as a police officer in the Wareham police station. A—I was.

Q—At any time during that week did you talk to Helen Leary and Ruth Jefferson or both. A—Yes.

Q—When was it during that week you had a talk with Helen Leary and Ruth Jefferson or both. A—Both of them. I do not know the exact date. Either it was Tuesday or Wednesday when I was told by Chief Churchill to bring them to the Wareham town hall.

Q—What time of the night was that. A—Around 9:30.

Q—Where did you go to get them. A—To the Casey home.

Q—And you brought them back to the Wareham police station. A—Yes.

Q—Did you have any talk with them on the way back from the Casey home to the Wareham police station. A—Just a little bit.

Q—I direct your attention now to that part of the talk, if there was such a part of the conversation with Helen Leary and Ruth Jefferson in which they described anyone to you. Do you recall if they talked about a description of anyone with you. A—I do.

Q—You took the girls to the Wareham police station and back home. A—I did not go to the Wareham police station. I went to the Casey home.

Q—On the way from the Casey home to the Town Hall did they talk. A—They didn't talk too much on the way down. They were kind of gloomy. They didn't have much to say.

Q—When you got to the Wareham Town Hall what occurred there. A—I drove up to the east side of the Town Hall and Chief Churchill met me there and when I went in he told me to follow him and wait until we got inside a door, which was the shooting range, with a glass in the door. I brought the girls in there and observed them while they were in there.

Q—Show us a photo. Is that the picture of the man that was there that night. A—Yes.

Q—Held as a suspect. A—He was.

Q—Will you tell us what Helen Leary or Ruth Jefferson or both said when they saw that man. A—They both got aside and said they were not sure. Then they talked it over. They stated they were not sure. They talked among themselves. I stood beside them. Then they looked at him for three or four minutes. Then the chief came out and they said: "I would like to have him smile. I would like to look at him smiling." Then the chief went back in to get him smiling.

Q—Did he get him smiling. A—Yes.

Q—Did he look at him while he was smiling. A—Yes.

Q—What did they say then he said. A—They said they didn't want to say, they didn't want to say no. They said there was a doubt.

Q—How long were you with them there at the Wareham police station while they were looking at the man. A—From the time we got to the Wareham town hall until the time we got back to Onset, I should say it was probably 15 minutes.

Q—Then did you bring them to the Casey home. A—I did.

Q—You say you had some more talk with them on the way home. A—Yes.

Q—Now Mr. Hogan, directing your attention to that part of the conversation on the way home from the Wareham police station, the conversation relating to a description of the man, will you tell us what description was given, I mean as to his personal appearance. A—I do not quite follow the question. About the one they just observed or about someone else.

Q—Someone else—in other words, this was after the disappearance of Ruth McGurk. A—Yes.

Q—I direct your attention to that part of the conversation about the description of a man with Ruth McGurk the night of July 27—as to his physical appearance. A—No, there was nothing.

Q—Anything mentioned about the man being a resident of Onset. A—No.

Q—Had you heard that time anything said about him being a resident of Onset. A—No.

Q—At some time you did hear it. A—Yes.

Q—When did you first hear it. A—Last week, I believe.

Q—What were your duties there at the Wareham police station this week of July 22, 1946. A—I was working in the office but not all that week.

Q—What were your duties the week of July 29. A—I worked in the office, too.

Q—What are your duties in the office. A—A clerk. Take complaints. Work on radio. Answer telephone. Things like that.

Q—Were you in charge of any reports of the Goodale investigation. A—No.

The witness was turned over to Dewing.

(Cross Examination)

Q—You knew that on July 28 the police investigating the disappearance of Ruth McGurk were looking for a man named Frank. A—No.

Q—When did you first learn that they were looking for a man named Frank. A—A couple of nights later, Monday or Tuesday.

Q—It was matter that had been talked about. A—I don't know.

Q—You knew that Lt. Sullivan asked all the officers in Wareham to look for a man named Frank in or about Onset. A—Yes.

Q—And they brought in a man named Frank. A—No.

Dewing then showed witness a

slip of paper (a police report).
Q—You knew that man's name was Frank. A—Yes.
Q—And his movements of July 27 were checked up on. A—Yes.
Q—He comes from Wareham. A—East Wareham.
Q—Officer Hogan, you are friendly with the Goodales. A—Yes.
Q—And you visit their home quite frequently. A—Yes.
(Re-direct Examination)
Q—Recall any other man than the one Mr. Dewing mentioned was brought into the station. A—No.

Q—Any one brought in between Aug. 1 to 8 that you know of. A—No.

Mrs. Ann Hatzis, of Brockton, was next called.
A petite, attractive bride of a month, she said that last summer she vacationed at Onset, rooming in West Central ave.

She said she was then Miss Ann Popoulos and that she had been working as a waitress in Brockton. She said she was in Onset from July 22 to Aug. 4, and that a short time after her arrival at the vacation report, she met a Claire Schindler, of Jones ave., Dorchester, and that they became friendly. She said she did not see Miss Schindler again from the time she left Onset Aug. 4, 1946 until yesterday.

Q—Where was Miss Schindler's room. A—On Onset ave.
Q—Directing your attention to Saturday, July 27, were you in Miss Schindler's company. A—Yes.

Q—At what time did you meet her. A—About 7 o'clock, we had supper together.

Q—In one of the restaurants in Onset. A—Yes.

Q—What time did you finish the meal. A—It took us about an hour.

Q—What did you go then? A—We went to her room.

Q—After spending some time at her room, where did you go? A—We walked along the avenue and went down to the bowling alleys, at the Casino dance hall.

Q—Did you see anyone you knew? A—Yes, some people from Brockton.

Q—What time did you arrive at the bowling alleys? A—About 9 o'clock.

Q—Was Claire Schindler with you? A—Yes.

Q—How long did you remain? A—Until about 10:30.

Q—During that time at the bowling alleys, were you waiting for anyone in particular? A—A friend of my nephew's.
Q—Did you meet that friend. A—No.

Q—Was Claire Schindler looking for anyone. A—We were both looking together for a friend of my nephew.

Q—After you left the bowling alleys at 10:30, where did you go. A—We walked to Claire's porch.

Q—Did you walk directly to Claire's porch or did you stop on the way. A—We stopped to look around and see if my friend was some place.

Q—You know there's a staircase from the dance hall to the street. A—Yes.

Q—You know there's a cocktail lounge below. A—There's a cocktail lounge and a stand where they sell hot dogs and that kind of stuff.

Q—You didn't go upstairs. A—No.

Q—Tell us about the lighting conditions in front of the cocktail lounge and the street floor of the Casino. A—It was fairly lighted up.

Q—While you were there did you observe a couple in the vicinity. A—Yes.

Q—Tell us where the couple was when you first observed them. A—They were standing in front of the Casino parking place to the right.

Q—What were the lighting conditions there. A—It was lit up from the gas station.

Q—How far were you from the couple.

The witness then indicated a distance of 25 feet more or less.

Q—Was the couple young or old? A—I'd say they were in their early twenties, a young couple, about 21 or 22.

Q—Did you observe how the girl was dressed? A—She had on a pink gaudy dress, and no coat. I don't know whether she was wearing stockings or not.

Q—What were her features like? A—She was a fairly attractive girl.

Q—What did you observe about her features? A—Nothing in particular.

Q—What did you notice about the mouth or teeth? A—They were good teeth. They were white.

Q—Were they large or small. A—I wouldn't say they were very small. They were bright.

Q—Were they prominent. A—Well, you could see them.

Q—Did you observe her hair. A—Her hair was long, longer than shoulder length. (The witness then raised both her hands to a point a few inches below her shoulders to indicate the length of the girl's hair.)

Q—What was the color of her hair. A—It looked dark brown to me.

Q—At the time you saw her, was there any particular reason why you should observe her. A—Just the fact that I noticed her dress. It was pretty. I was looking for something in pink myself. I admired it.

Q—Notice anything else about her hair. A—Well, it seemed naturally curly, it was flat at the top. I believe it had a beret in it.

Q—Was it parted. A—Something on the side to clasp to her head.

Q—While looking at her, did you observe a man. A—Yes.

Q—How was the man dressed. A—He had on white pants and a white shirt.

Q—Did he have on a coat. A—No.

Q—Describe his shirt. A—His shirt was open at the neck. He didn't wear a tie.

Q—He had on white pants. A—Yes.

Q—Was he in shirt-sleeves. A—I don't recall whether it was rolled up or what it was.

Q—Were his arms bare. A—I don't remember.

Q—Did you observe his features. A—His face was on the long side. It wasn't round and his hair was combed straight back.

Q—What was the color of his hair. A—It was either dark brown or black.

Q—What was the height of the girl. A—I wouldn't say that she was any taller than I. (The witness appeared to be about five feet two inches).

Q—Did you notice the height of the man? A—I could only see him from the nose up.

Q—What were they doing? A—They were talking and laughing.

Q—Did you observe whether his arm was in her's. A—Both his arms were in hers.

Q—Did you leave before them? A—Yes.

Q—Where were they when you left? A—They didn't move. They were in the same spot.

Q—Some time after that did you hear of the disappearance of Ruth McGuirk. A—Yes, I read about it in the newspapers.

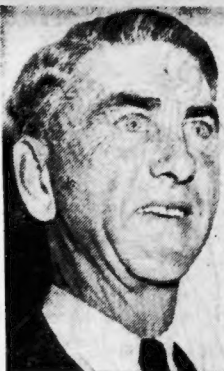

Q—Did you see her picture in the newspapers. A—Yes.

Q—Did you also see a picture of the defendant Goodale. A—Yes.

Q—After seeing the pictures of Goodale what did you do. A—I wrote a letter to Mr. Dewing.

Q—What was the date you wrote the letter. A—Aug. 8.

Q—What did you say in the letter you wrote to Mr. Dewing. A—I told him about what I saw that night—July 27—told him also

OFFICER RICHARD HOGAN
Girls "Sure, Then Not Sure"

about the dress and what the man wore.

Q—As a result of that letter to Mr. Dewing what happened? A—An officer came to my house and brought me to the Wareham police station.

Q—At the Wareham police station did they show you some pictures? A—Yes.

Q—Did you identify the pictures as the girl who you saw in Onset on the night of July 27? A—Yes. I pointed out one from the group.

Callahan then showed the witness a photo of Ruth McGuirk.

Q—Can you tell us if you recognize the picture of this girl as the girl you saw at Onset? A—There is a resemblance. Callahan then showed the witness a composite photo showing full length of Ruth McGuirk.

Q—Does that look like her? A—The build is about the same.

Q—How about the hair? A—About the same.

Q—How about the teeth? A—They resemble the teeth I saw.

Q—You say you paid particular attention to the dress she was wearing. Was that the dress you saw? A—About the same as that, plain like that. But these sleeves seem to be a little different.

Q—Color of the dress resembles color you saw? A—Color is the same.

Q—And the shoes in the picture? A—Same kind.

Q—What time did you leave the bowling alley? A—About 10:30.

Q—And you say this couple at what time? A—About ten minutes later, about twenty minutes of eleven.

Q—I want you to look at the defendant. At this point Callahan asked the prisoner to stand and Goodale stood up and faced the witness.

Q—Would you say that Charles Russell Goodale was the man you saw in Onset on the night of July 27? A—He doesn't resemble him at all.

Q—Do you know Russell Goodale? A—No, I met him for the first time last Thursday.

Callahan surrendered the witness to Dewing.

(Cross Examination)
Q—This letter you sent. Was notice sent to the police by Wareham? Yes, it was.

Q—And immediately upon its receipt an officer called on you? A—Yes.

Q—You were brought to the State Police at Wareham? A—Yes.

Q—And I was there and I interviewed you? A—I do not recall you asking me many questions. Mr. Clark did most of the questioning.

Q—But I was there. You recall that I was there? A—Yes, you were there.

Q—And you recall that you were asked where you lived? A—Yes.

Q—And where you stayed in Onset? A—Yes.

Q—And you stated you lived on Central ave. Where is that? A—In Onset.

Dewing went over to the Commonwealth counsel table to confer with Clark.

Q—Do you know the Piney Lake Club? A—Yes.

Q—You lived near it, didn't you? A—A little further down.

Q—You were at 27 Central ave? A—Yes.

Q—How late did you stay in the bowling alleys? A—In the bowling alleys until about 10:30.

Q—Where did you go after you left the bowling alleys? A—To a little stand on the side of the road where they sell hot dogs, tonic and sandwiches.

Q—How long were you there? A—About 10 minutes.

Q—To get to the stand you had to walk across the street? A—We crossed the street.

Q—In going across the street, this girl you speak of attracted your attention? A—Yes.

Q—You were not very close to her were you. A—Not too close.

Q—You told Mr. Clark that it wasn't too near that you saw her. A—No.

Q—You said you were interested in the dress that she was wearing. A—Yes.

Q—When you talked with Mr. Clark about the dress the only description you could give was that of a pink dress, is that so. A—I do not recall it.

Q—Did you not tell Mr. Clark that she had black straight hair that hung down? A—Yes, down like this.

(The witness waved her two hands gracefully from the top of her head along her shoulders to her breast.)

Q—Yes, you said that it was black and straight and down like this? A—My meaning was that she wore her hair falling down. It was not done up.

Q—Those were the words that you used? A—I meant...

Q—But those were the exact words that you used? (Dewing is now referring to notes.) A—I cannot remember the exact words. I know what I meant.

Q—Does this refresh your recollection? A—I was trying to explain that her hair was down (Again she demonstrated with her hands) in folds.

Q—Down to the chest, you point out? A—Yes.

Q—You told Mr. Clark differently than that about the hair? A—I meant what I said.

Q—And the man this girl you saw was with was dressed all in white? A—Yes.

Q—And you did not get too near to them? A—No.

Q—You were there prior to July 27 down in Onset? A—Yes.

Q—Did you ever see that young lady around Onset? A—No.

Callahan then called the next witness, Claire Schindler, of Jones ave., Dorchester, who stated that she was single and an office worker.

MISS CLAIRE SCHINDLER
(Direct Examination)

Q—Did you spend your vacation in Onset last year. A—Yes.

Q—Where did you stay. A—At a rooming house on Onset ave.

Q—Some time while you were there did you make the acquaintance of a girl named Anna Popoulos. A—I did.

Q—And from the time you first

EDWARD GOMES
"I Took Off Door Handle"

met her until you left, you and she were chums and went around together. A—Yes.

Q—Do you recall Saturday night, July 27, at some time you went with her to some place. A—Yes, to the bowling alleys located under the dance hall, at about 9 o'clock.

Q—Did you meet anyone at the bowling alleys that you knew. A—No.

Q—Did you look for anyone in particular around the Casino. A—Yes, a boy friend that I met down there.

Q—How long did you stay in the bowling alleys? A—About one hour and a half.

Q—You think you left at 10:30? A—Yes.

Q—After you came out of the bowling alleys, what did you do? A—We went to the stand where they serve refreshments.

Q—How long did you stay at the stand? A—About 11 minutes.

Q—Was Anna with you? A—Yes.

Q—Where did you go after that? A—For a walk on Onset ave., past the gasoline station.

Q—You went toward Onset Center. A—Yes.

Q—You crossed over by the gas station that makes the triangle. A—Yes.

Q—When you left the stand, were Anna and you walking together. A—Yes, for a little while we were, but I walked ahead of her and she stopped.

Q—Did she catch up with you. A—Yes.

Q—How much later? A—About five minutes later.

Q—Where did you go? A—To the place where I stay.

Q—After Anna caught up with you, did she speak to you and tell you what she saw when she lagged behind? A—No.

JURIES NEED WOMEN

THE MASSACHUSETTS Senate should pass the House-approved bill extending jury service to women.

As it now reads, the bill exempts mothers of minor children, hospital workers and members of religious orders.

That, of course, is much more to women's credit than the original legislation devised by the House Judicial Committee which permitted jury service to be shunned for almost any reason.

It is pertinent to recall that an unfortunate accident a generation ago deprived Massachusetts of the honor of being the first State to have women jurors.

When the legislators amended the election statutes they neglected to change the jury service laws. Consequently, Bay State women were only PARTIALLY EMANCIPATED.

They became the equals of their husbands, sons, brothers and fathers in all elections—municipal, county, State and Federal.

But they did not receive this equality in any tribunal; in fact, so far as juries were concerned, they remained on a par with children, morons, aliens and convicts.

Now the Senate, and later the Governor, will be able to restore women to their rightful place of dignity.

And the whole Commonwealth will benefit, for women can be relied upon to make trials more honest and honorable, and infinitely more responsive and responsible to the people—to women as well as to men.

WE ARE GRATEFUL

THE Institute for American Democracy has cited the Boston Record-American-Sunday Advertiser for their contribution to tolerance and patriotism.

Accepting the honor, Mr. Harold G. Kern, publisher of the Boston Hearst newspapers, thanked the Institute and pointed out that tolerance and patriotism are FUNDAMENTAL AMERICANISM.

Chaplains during the recent world holo-caust did not ask whether dying soldiers were Catholics, Jews or Protestants; nor were the dying men themselves particular as to who supplied them with final spiritual comfort.

Again, aviators might be Baptists and those coming to their aid in the event of mishap might be Catholics. It made no difference.

COMMON FAITH SERVED AS A SYMBOL OF BROTHERHOOD, AND WAS A PASSPORT TO SAFETY AND VICTORY FOR AMERICANS OF ALL CREEDS.

That spirit must continue in peacetime.

The Record-American-Sunday Advertiser are proud of the citation which says:

"In appreciation of the highly important contributions made by the Record-American-Sunday Advertiser in encouraging a better understanding among men of all races, creeds, and national origins, the Board of Directors of the Institute for American Democracy, Inc., of New York, publicly acknowledges this splendid service to the New England community by the publisher of these outstanding newspapers. HOW MANY MORE ESSENTIAL INDUSTRIES MUST WE SACRIFICE TO OTHER PARTS OF THE COUNTRY BEFORE OUR NEW ENGLAND GOVERNORS AND LEGISLATORS WAKE UP?

The time has come to put service to the people above subservience to powerful lobbyists representing selfish interests.

No company would leave us if we developed our scandalously neglected water power, and other wasted natural resources.

If I were dead, and in my place, some fresher youth designed to warm with new fires and grace the arms I left behind. Good looks and fortune you must find

In greater men than I But my true resolved mind They never shall come nigh. For I not for an hour did love Or for a day desire But with my soul had from above This endless, holy fire.

—HENRY VAUGHAN.

NEW YORKER ASKS if it is possible for "a man of 51" to increase his height one and a half inches. He is not interested in being taller than she is. He wants to get into the fire department. His height is 5 feet 5 inches. The minimum height for the New York fire department is 5 feet 6 inches. I have heard of men increasing their height one inch by stretching exercises but never of one who has increased his height one and a half inches.

ASKING: Queries from clients. Q—You know lots of men who roll their own cigarettes. But my husband rolls his own cigars. What do you think of that?

Very interesting. Where did he learn cigar making? Will he give me some lessons? Where does he get his tobacco? Q—Maureen O'Hara Did you see the racing picture, "The Homestretch"? I say Maureen O'Hara wore over 50 different costumes in that picture. My wife says about 35. Could you check this for us? A—Am informed that in the film you name Miss O'Hara wore 41 different costumes, 15 of which were evening gowns.

Maureen O'Hara

SAYS SHE: "I have noticed you can get an inkling of the character of a couple by the names they give their children," writes a Chicagoan. "People who give their children slightly fancy names such as Brooke, Leslie, Jeffrey, Shelley, Henry, Diane, Nigel and Sandra are usually exhibitionists, a little on the snobbish side and very society page conscious. Those who follow a current popular trend and name their children Brenda, Karen, Barbara, Gary, Gregory, etc., are generally cautious, conservative and unimaginative. Nice people; but not very intelligent. Those who adhere to the good, old-fashioned names such as Mary, John, Paul, David, Ann, Ruth, etc., are usually people of excellent character, good breeding and a sense of high ideals."

HORSES & WOMEN: It is suggested by a number of subscribers the best way to treat a young wife is to be "tough" when necessary. All the subscribers making this suggestion are women whose husbands have apparently followed that system. However, the ladies are all agreed it takes an unusual man to make a success of this method. They say he must know when to be tough and when to be tender. The difficulty is that many husbands are either too tough or too tender and at the wrong times. Our Horses & Women department has been requested to make a study of this angle in order that we may properly advise any bachelor clients who may be interested.

PASSING BY: Adele Rowland. Musical comedy star of the yesteryear. Remember her in "The Only Girl"? And in vaudeville singing "A Garden In The Rain"? "Mickey" Rooney, Hollywoodian. Scheduled to play "Kid" McCoy in a film based on the boxer's life. The episode of the introduction by McCoy of the "cockroach" punch should make an interesting sequence in that picture.

ASIDES: In a recent poll as to conditions in life among the married in London, England, the majority of wives questioned said their husbands were "cold"... Dorothy Dorothy, of Las Vegas, Nev., wagered me one stogie she was the only girl in the U. S. A. with that repeating name. She loses. There is a Miss Dorothy Dorothy in Blakesburg, Ia.

HAT CHECKING: "I do not like hat check girls," writes a New Yorker. "A man has to tip the girl to get his hat back and the best he ever gets is a 'prop' smile (very seldom) and a very insincere 'thank you' (very seldom). Very often his hat is returned to him battered and with a smear of amelly hair pomade. This latter condition is caused by the fact that no check room has enough space to spread the hats out properly—so they are piled on top of each other."

PLEASE NOTE: The taxicab rates in New York City have been the same for 21 years. When raising them was recently discussed many taxi drivers objected. They said with higher rates people would do less tipping. The reason for the objection is plain. The taxi slipper gets 100 per cent of the tips but only 42 per cent of what's on the meter. On a 50-cent ride, if he gets a ten cent tip, his share of the take on the trip is approximately 30 cents.

THESE DAYS

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

Copyright, 1947, by King Features Syndicate

YOU CAN CALL Herbert Hoover, Tom Dewey, Bob Taft, or anybody else, a Fascist. Nothing happens when you do that but I wonder what the Governor of North Carolina would do to the Governor of South Carolina, if one called the other a Republican. There are limits to what can be said about a public man.

George E. Sokolsky

I have known politicians to smile when they were called crooks, to get a merry twinkle in their eyes when they were denounced as grafters. I have even known them to refer to each other in those delectable Anglo-Saxon terms which no gentleman takes without a smile. But when the state politicians are called Communists or Reds, they flare up as though someone had discovered their right name.

It is all a matter of fashion. There was a time when everybody wanted to be known as a Liberal. Definitions were offensive, of course, because what was one man's liberalism was another man's poison.

For instance, Fiorello LaGuardia was one of America's deepest-dyed liberals. But it was his police department, which he personally managed as mayor of New York, that sent an undercover crew into all sorts of organizations to spy on them.

That has just come out after a long secrecy. When Himmler did that in Germany it was denounced as the worst form of Fascistic depravity. Here it is liberalism.

IT IS LIBERAL and good manners to denounce a man for being a stooge, a tool, a front for the N. A. M., even if he dislikes the N. A. M. For instance, the Hartley-Taft labor bill is being widely described as an N. A. M. bill in spite of the fact that the N. A. M. had as much to do with it as you or I.

True, there has been some boastful N. A. M. advertising to give the impression of achievement where there is none. If, however, you attack a senator as being under CIO pressures, even if true, it is an offensive accusation which he resents. Is he ashamed of that association?

The greatest crime of all is to call a man a Communist even if every public act shows him to be one. You have to be careful about that. You can call him a dope but not a Communist even if you can quote him head on as supporting every twist and twirl of the Communist line.

Some try the subterfuge of saying that he is pro-Communist which is no go, because that is still disgraceful and humiliating. He might sue for millions of dollars of damages. You might say that he loves Stalin more than Truman, which is his constitutional privilege, or that the Kremlin is a better headquarters than the White House, which is a matter of taste. But you cannot say he is a Communist unless you have a copy of his party card.

THE OTHER DAY I saw a piece which used a phrase, "The Hoover-Truman-Vatican policy." You can say that about anybody. But it is troublesome to suggest that anybody, even if you can put the words in parallel columns, speaks the Kremlin-Third International line. That defames the poor bloke.

I think this is all to the good. If people are proud of their causes, they are not ashamed of them. No man sues for libel if he is described, let us say, as a Christian. But there are suits going these days for calling men Communists. That's fine. That means that they are ashamed of that association. That means that it has become a disgrace, an insult, a humiliation, to be called a Communist. Nothing could be better for the country.

HOW HELPFUL IT WOULD BE to these fashionable gadabouts if all records could be burned; if the petitions they signed and the letters they wrote, and the letterheads on which their names appeared could be destroyed.

What a relief it would be to them if all the speeches that were ghosted for them and the books that were written for them could be expunged.

Unfortunately, there are collectors of such trivia who occasionally check on the facts and call a spade by its name. When the revolution comes, it will be a tragedy to own such collections.

Hollywood

By Louella O. Parsons

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
HOLLYWOOD, May 24—Those gay, giddy gals, "The Gold Diggers," are being revived—and guess for whom? Nobody else but Joan Crawford, who has been going in for very heavy dramas lately. George Oppenheim is already at work on the script.

Believe me, this won't be heavy, for "The Gold Diggers" has been spreading sophisticated comedy and catchy music ever since it was debuted on Broadway years ago, with Ina Claire in the lead, and later cropped up on the screen in several versions. I mean Warner made the original and then followed in with "Gold Diggers of 1933" and a couple of other years.

Ginger Rogers was in one of them and Joan Blondell and Ruby Keeler in another. The 1941 version, as produced by Jerry Wald, will be all right for Miss Crawford. Remember her first screen hits were along the dancing lady lines—or have you forgotten?

IF HARRY SHERMAN makes "Carmen of the West" and Alexander Korda films just plain "Carmen" they're going to be faced with trouble.

Harry Cohn registered the "Carmen" title two years ago for a motion picture, and since that is Rita Hayworth's first picture when she gets back in the fall, he's going to see that the Johnson office lives up to the agreement made sometime ago that no two companies can come out with the same title at the same time.

"Carmen" to most people means the Prosper Merimee book, and, of course, the operatic score by Bizet. However, even though "Carmen" is in public domain, Harry Cohn can and will maintain that he has first dibs on the title.

IF FATE is riding with you, you don't have to come to Hollywood to crash the movies—Hollywood comes to you.

Let me say, fate was riding with Irene Robinson, ticket seller in Phoenix, when Gene Autry planned in last Monday. He took one look at the Miss behind the TWA grill, and said, "How would you like to be a movie actress?"

It was as simple as that, and Irene is now doing the second female lead in Gene's first for Columbia, "The Last Roundup."

She isn't as much of a novice as first supposed. She had been a Conover model and two years ago moved to Arizona because of her health. P. S. Irene is a looker—a 23-year-old brunette.

THE BOB HOPE children are inconsolable over the death of Red Son, an eight-year-old Great Dane. His death proved again how great an attachment dogs have for each other and how they pine when one leaves.

Red Son had a pal and playmate in Tappy, a smart little cocker spaniel. Then Tappy took sick and died and the great dane, in perfect health, simply pined away. Few humans have that great a love. Certainly, anyone who ever has the love of a dog is mighty lucky, for their devotion is unfailing.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: "The Pirate" has really had its troubles—I mean the pure. Judy Garland has been off the set time and time again with one cold after another.

Now for 10 days the picture has been closed down because of Gene Kelly. He's had flu so badly he's been unable to work, and so Vincent Minelli, the director, has shut down production until Gene is well again.

Judy tells me Gene looks absolutely sensational with his mustache. I must go out there next week and see for myself.

I was talking to Fannie Brice, who has just received a letter from Harry Pilser from Paris. Harry is coming here in September with a script on the life of Gaby Dellys, the French singer, with whom he was associated for a long time.

He has all the rights, given him by Gaby's family. The thing that interests the dancer's family most is having an actress of whom they approve play the part. At one time there was talk that the late Carole Lombard would do it, and that is the type they want.

As I left, Fannie said, "Meet you at Panchell's Red Barn Sunday."

"For what?" I asked.
"For a sale of antiques," she said.

"It Happened on Fifth Avenue" has found such a response wherever it has been shown that Roy Del Ruth plans an encore. The second edition will be called "It Happened in Washington" with Victor Moore set for the same sort of role he played in "Fifth Avenue."

Victor, by the way, has sold all his holdings in the East and will settle in Hollywood permanently, which means he is giving up the stage for the screen.

SNAPSHOT OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: Eileen Percy's son, James Busch, is marrying Gloria Stagerwald as soon as they find a place to live. Goodness, gracious I can scarcely believe Cubby is old enough to marry, but of course, he is, because he was in service.

Because of an unscheduled, uninvited appearance of a reporter at Bette Davis' Laguna Beach home, her doctors have ordered her to move out of the gates. She is to have complete rest and no more visitors.

Saw Greer Garson dining with Sam Raphaelson, apparently talking over a story. Greer dines out more often these days.

I think, than she used to. I don't believe she sees Richard Ney any more. Perhaps because every time they appeared together it got in the newspapers and there is no further chance of a reconciliation.

Margaret Whiting, who recently broke her engagement to George Gruskin, was at the Headress Ball at the Ambassador last night with Joseph, hat designer.

Lew Ayres' most serious romance is Jacqueline White, RKO actress.

The guests of Hernandez Courtwright, who gave a party for her friends, were Gray and his wife, Maria Louisa Figueroa. didn't have to wonder where Courtwright's pretty wife was. Hernandez handed each of the 130 guests a printed card telling that his wife was on her way home from Mexico City. Jeanne Crain and Paul Brinkman made one of their first appearances since their baby was born. The Waller Pidgeons, Edward G. Robinson and Cary Grant and many others greeted the Mexican visitors. I was delighted to see Gloria Swanson, done up in black with red gloves and red bag. That girl has solved the secret of keeping her youth.

Walt Disney, who is spending $3,000,000 on his screen version of "Alice in Wonderland," left today to see the stage play in New York.

Anita Stewart with James Davidson at Charley Foy's, and he was mighty attentive. That was Dianne Garrett, Mickey Rooney's former friend, with Dave Rose at Arthur's.

A wonderful benefit is being staged at the Shrine Auditorium, June 2, for the Westview Hospital. Harpo Marx, who has been very active in this project, has rounded up Danny Kaye, Burns and Allen, Joe Louis, the champ, Tony Martin and others to turn on the charm for the entertainment.

Boston After Dark

FORECAST (for 1948): The Legislature will not get "bookmakers' bill" or off-track betting. . . But in 1948, this sensational projected legislation will hold the front pages and the public interest for weeks. . . The factions which will be lined up on both sides of this controversial legislation will be highly organized when it comes time for a vote.

For millions and millions of dollars will be at stake.

THE SURPRISING feature of this startling bill to legalize pari-mutuels betting away from the race track is the support it has won already in a supposedly conservative state like Massachusetts where church and reform and philanthropic and humanitarian organizations are strongly supported. . . Men close to important individuals on Beacon Hill say that if the measure were put to a vote right now it probably would skim through with a margin of victory in both houses. . . But proponents of the legislation—a design for "harmless taxation"—are not ready to put the Legislature's sentiment to the test yet. . . The bill, in fact, has not been drawn yet in the terminology desired by those in back of it.

AS IT WILL be presented finally to the Legislature, the measure will provide that all money bet in the bookmakers' rooms is to be cleared through the race tracks, horse and dog. . . These legalized bookie shops, therefore, will be branch offices of the race tracks. . . You can imagine what a salutary effect that situation will have on the "handles" of the race tracks. . . Early and unofficial estimates are that $4,000,000 a day at Suffolk Downs, and $2,000,000 handles at the dog tracks, will be a regular thing. (And these estimates are conservative.)

THIS COLUMN has become interested in the so-called "bookmakers' bill" because, unwittingly, it was responsible in part for the practical idea that the measure would have a better chance of success if it could be promoted with the support of the race tracks. . . Anyone who has followed legislation at Beacon Hill knows the strength that can be mustered among the solons when legislative attacks are launched on the race tracks. . . We happened to be motorized one day with several prominent legislators and a noted lobbyist when the "bookmakers' bill" came up for discussion.

IT WAS THE TIME when Chairman Harry Allen, of the State Racing Commission, had made his unexpected proposal that the "bookmakers' bill" be enacted in order that the State might be saved the onus of a sales-tax. . . In view of the prominence of our traveling companions, the legislators, that your correspondent took it for granted that they were familiar with every angle of the projected legislation. . . It developed that none of them knew more than they had read in the papers about "off the track betting." . . Questions were asked us. . . To one we replied that it was our opinion that the legislation possibly could be put through if the race tracks were behind it, and the sure way to insure that support would be to make the race tracks benefit financially from the legislation.

WE LEARNED a short time later than an important conference in the State House resulted from this discussion, and that new and able interests had bowed into the picture. . . These new supporters of the "bookmakers' bill" suggested that, in the mechanics of taking bets away from the racetrack, these "bookie shops" should be legalized as sub-stations of the tracks. . . When the bill is ready for a vote, you will find that this will be the form of its final draft.

BEFORE ANY READER rushes to his brokers with a buy order for stock in Suffolk Downs solely on the prospect that the East Boston track will be handling in 1948 or 1949 more money than any two race-tracks in the world, we would advise utmost caution. . . Potential interests will be grouped in opposition to the "bookmakers' bill." . . The churches undoubtedly will be arrayed against the measure. . . Important merchants, including the department stores and chain food stores, are almost certain to be taking a hand in opposition before the bill is put to a vote. . . In fact, campaign lines are being drawn thus early. . . The race-track lobby will be fortified by the powerful lobby which each year keeps an eye on legislation having to do with the interest rate on small loans. . . (Loan companies thrive in industrial centers where there is plenty of legalized gambling.)

BUT AGAINST these admittedly influential forces, the same groups who made a State lottery in Massachusetts an impossible achievement will be allied solidly to defeat the "bookmakers' bill." . . An interesting commentary on the off-track betting bill is the political pressure being exerted even now on behalf of aspiring "legal bookmakers" who hope to be licensed to take bets if the bill becomes law.

16 Fashion-Wise In Cottons

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE
Beauty and Fashion Editor

COTTON is no longer fashion's step-child but the city slicker and country chum of America's best-dressed women. Miss Hope Skillman, one of America's foremost cotton authorities told a capacity Hotel Somerset audience at a luncheon-meeting of the Fashion Group of Boston yesterday. Bolstering her contention that cotton, the means of livelihood for one out of every 10 persons in this nation, is no longer "kitchen" or "utility" but a fabric that tells a new story in high fashion to open the eyes of the most fashion-wise to its tremendous sophistication and consummate elegance, Miss Skillman showed several creations by topflight designers.

Many of them were prophetic for they indicated the new trend of combining for fall "hothouse" cottons with velvet, wool and corduroy in charming twosomes particularly designed with the "back to college" girl in mind.

Paris couturiers who have always made much of cotton... this season extend its fashionable appeal to even greater fashion artistry. Three such creations by Pierre Balmain were shown... two of which we've pictured. Young and gay, they savor of the continental touch.

BETTER VALUES

Miss Skillman pointed out in her discourse that it would be industrial suicide for the nation if cotton fabric manufacturers were forced to "get back to the ten cents a yard cotton."

"We didn't do well, the workers didn't, the growers didn't," she said. "They realize that the more money that stays in the workers' pockets, the more purchasing power they have. That's what we need. So today, in our end, and the manufacturers' end, you are finding a better value."

"What about our future in cotton? I believe in an aggressive fashion stand. We assume that prices are right. The emphasis must be on fashion. We must have the new silhouette that women are looking for. We must make the clothes in their closets completely obsolete."

"The 100 per cent wearability... once an old-fashioned virtue... we can't afford to practice in an industry economy. Fortunately the consumer is tired of her old clothes, anyway, and her desire for new ones coincides with this plan of ours to give women new clothes with the new season."

Miss Skillman disclosed that virtually every topflight designer has included cotton in his collection and has made this fabric an integral part of his clothes presentation.

COLORFUL DESIGNS

Among the cottons shown were classic and dressmaker interpretations of highly colorful designs. Solid colors in new blues and browns and yellows... striped cottons in muted tones... cotton appliqued on cotton... all of these bore proud testimony that cotton clothes accepted high-style detail as easily and as gracefully as other more lavish textiles.

Miss Skillman was introduced by Miss Harriet Wilmsky, director of the Boston Fashion Group. Others at the head table included Michael T. Kelleher, president Boston Chamber of Commerce; Carl N. Schmalz, president, R. H. Stearns; George C. Wiswell, president, Advertising Club of Boston; Herbert J. Clapp, vice-president, C. Crawford Hollidge Co.; Harold D. Hodgkinson, vice-president and general manager, Eliene's; Robert M. Dowling, sales and advertising manager, Cluett-Peabody Co.; Cameron Thompson, vice-president, Jordan Marsh; Miss Elizabeth Jackson, personnel director, Jays; and Jessie MacDonald, Vesper-George School of Art.

COTTON with a Parisian flavor is this Pierre Balmain creation fashioned of a Hope Skillman light-cocoa chambray. The detachable Quaker collar is of white pique... its edge stitched in cocoa brown, similarly the hemline of the full-skirted dress. The bodice is especially feminine and tight-fitting to accent... dramatically... the square-throat, bow-tied collar.

Try Quick Orange Bread

NOVELTY BREADS change the humble sandwich into a glamorous treat, whether the sandwich is jumbo size for husky hikers or dainty bite-size cut in fancy shapes for the tea tray.

Variety in sandwich breads as well as fillings enlivens the lunch hour for daily sandwich-toters, too. Since these breads slice better when they are a day old than when fresh, they can be made in advance and kept on hand a day or two, until every slice has been used up.

Orange—add a pleasantly tart flavor to quick sandwich breads, just as they do to almost any other baked product. Save the rinds of the oranges juiced for breakfast. They make this bread chewy and moist.

QUICK ORANGE BREAD

2 cups sifted-enriched flour
1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 cup sugar
2 eggs
1/2 cup orange juice
1/2 tsp. melted shortening
Orange mixture
Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Beat eggs well. Add orange juice, shortening and cooked orange mixture. Combine egg mixture with flour mixture. Bake in greased loaf pan in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 1 hour. Makes 1 loaf.

ORANGE MIXTURE

Rinds of 2 large oranges
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup water
Simmer rinds in hot water 10 minutes. Drain, cover with water and cook until tender, about 10 minutes. Drain and shred. Add sugar and water and cook slowly until a thick syrup is formed and the rinds have become semi-transparent. Cool.

Nuts are excellent in novelty quick breads, particularly with fruits that are rich and mild in taste, such as prunes and bananas. In this Prune Nut Bread, cinnamon adds just the touch needed to bring out the prune flavor. This bread has a pleasing moistness that he's it to slice well. It is delicious with a cream cheese filling.

Now that bananas are plentiful again, extend their mellow richness into a sweet nut sandwich bread, and add a bit of lemon juice to accent the banana flavor.

PRUNE NUT BREAD

2 cups sifted enriched flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 cup shortening
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1/4 cup finely chopped cooked prunes
1/2 cup milk
1 cup chopped nuts, if desired
Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and cinnamon. Cream together shortening and sugar until light and fluffy. Add eggs, beating well. Fold in prunes. Add flour mixture to creamed mixture alternately with milk. Add nuts, if desired. Pour into greased loaf pan, 4 1/2 x 8 1/2 inches. Bake in moderate oven (350 deg. F.) 1 hour and 15 minutes. Makes 1 loaf.

Family Has Turned Her Out

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am 19 years old and have been going with a boy 21 for a year. During that time we had an affair, and now I am going to have his child. After I told him about the child he grew cold toward me. I told my mother and father and they want nothing to do with me.

Is there some place an unmarried mother can go for help?

"UNHAPPY."—Yes, fortunately there are people in the world who have more humanity in them than these parents of yours seem to have, and who have set up facilities to care for girls in your situation whose families have turned them out to shift for themselves.

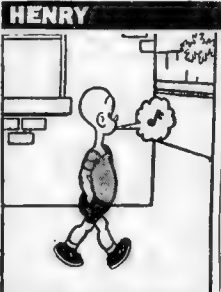

Such people do not take any less serious view of these things than your parents do.

they believe that the first thing to do is to give the needed help. The Florence Crittenton League maintains homes all over the United States for unmarried girls who are expectant mothers, and if you will write me for the name of the one near you, I will send it to you promptly.

HELP A FAULTY MEMORY.

Don't ever ask the not-helpful question, "Don't you remember me?" Come to the aid of the person, who obviously can't recall your name, by giving your name, address, and phone number. —MRS. BEECHMAN.

20 Ted and Torgy: Measure of Two Homerun Hitters

Earl Torgeson

By AUSTEN LAKE

THE TEXT OF TODAY'S little sermon is Earl Torgeson vs. Ted Williams and how the potentialities of the Braves' novice first sacker compare with the maturities of the Red Sox left fielder. For in many ways the two hitters are oddly similar, just as in others they are opposites.

Both are built like human rake handles, each being 6-3 long of limb and with the same fulcrum of power 'twix ankle and wrist. Torgeson has knocked in 30 runs to lead his league while Williams' 25 RBI leads his circuit. Ted has 10 home runs and Torgy 8. Ted was a juvenile 21 when he came to the Sox in 1939. Earl is a junior 23. But there the similarity ends with Williams currently, in his sixth major league year, batting a robust .337, and Earl, in his freshman semester, a modest .299. So this prospectus must deal with what Torgy may do in five years at the age and experience of his vis-a-vis. "He's improving every day," says bench boss Billy Southworth, "In two years he'll be a mature ballplayer." For a seedling sprout he's not doing badly now.

TEMPERAMENTALLY THE TWO men are as far apart as Spitzbergen and Little America. For where Ted is moody, driven by his emotions and at times foams like a seltzer bottle, Earl is placid and given neither to sudden gusts of gaiety nor periods of waspish temper.

For instance this spring Torgy, as awkward a first sacker as Ted in his primary days was a left fielder, clung to an old misshapen mitt despite Billy Southworth's frequent efforts to have him use a new, more efficient model. So Billy hid the old mitt and Shorty Young, locker room custodian, said casually, "Oh, by the way Earl, that old, worn out pancake you had in your locker. Didn't think you needed it so I gave it to a kid."

For a moment Torgy was thunderstruck. This was calamity! His beloved old heirloom! Jeepers! Southworth intervened, "Shorty's kiddin', Earl," he said, "I have the mitt. It's too precious an antique to lose. I'm going to have it stuffed and mounted in Cooperstown's Hall of Fame." Earl saw the point and grinned ruefully, then went out and broke in his new mitt.

"Know what I'm going to do," promised Southworth as he told the yarn today: "We play the Yankees an exhibition at Cooperstown in July. I'm going to have the museum custodian put Torgy's old mitt in a prominent spot—just for the day mind you, with a placard reading: 'Famous relic of Earl Torgeson—just for a gag.'"

The significance of the incident is this: Can you imagine smothering Ted Williams' favorite glove and what would happen if you did? The ensuing tempest would scare the pigeons on the Common. Ted's ears would spout live steam. He would jump up and down like to shudder off his clothes. But Torgy took it docilely.

BOTH MEN ARE TOP-GRADE competitors with plenty of infestational gumption. In an early Braves-Pirate series the Pittsburgh pitcher, Nick Strincevich, "dusted" Torgy off with successive throws, spinning him on the heel of his britches. They were obvious bean balls. Yet Torgy rose, calmly slapped the dirt from his pants and observed reprovingly: "I'm going to continue getting up until your arm falls off." No ear-burning profanity! No invitations to post game combat! Then he blasted the next pitch against the cigar sign, 390 feet from the plate.

Ted is apt to be gloweringly glum after a bad day at the plate, though more affable this season than formerly. Yet the ball authors usually stay away from him on "goose egg" days. Not so with Torgy! He recently had a bad afternoon at Brooklyn, with a row of horse collars at bat and mixing his feet and losing the ball down his pants. But the next day he was brilliant, hitting 3 to 4 and fielding like a virtuoso. So a Brooklyn ball writer dropped around to take down any gem of wisdom. "Looked pretty good out there," said the writer. "Yeh," said Torgy, "but didn't I look awful yesterday?"

TORGY, LIKE TED, is primarily a "pull" hitter who splashes most of his drives into dead right field. But unlike Ted he's not a home run lunatic—with his eyes fixed half-heartily on the fences. And, as yet, Torgy isn't the artist with his bat that is Theodore, the recognized wizard of our time. So the opposition doesn't use the gang-shift on Torgy as it does on Ted. It knows he can chop the ball into left with reasonable ease.

Somewhat to the surprise of the gallery of newsmen who foregathered to jot down any pearls that Southworth keeps on his tongue, Billy said today: "Torgy's the fastest man on the Braves. He'll get more leg-hits than any of the boys." By leg-hits, obviously, Billy meant beating out infield rollers, a thing that less-foolish Ted rarely does.

Both Ted and Torgy came directly out of Pacific Coast high schools to class AA ball, a single jump. But where Ted had three years of minor seasoning with San Diego and Minneapolis, Torgy had virtually only one year with Seattle before Uncle Sam's long arm grabbed him for service. Consequently he is less polished than his Sox rival, who sprayed 31 homers over the fences in his first year at Fenway.

"He's improving every day," repeated Southworth. "In two years you'll see a really mature ball player."

Spann Opposes Kennedy Under Wigwam Arc Lights

By FRED HOEY

Two youthful masters of southpaw pitching will oppose each other tonight at Braves Field when Warren Spann operates for the Braves and Monty Kennedy works for the Giants in the second game of the current series.

Those fans who fancy real pitching battles should get their fill when these two pitchers flash their stuff under arc lights tonight. Spann holds a perfect record of 6-0, and Kennedy has a 3-2 mark. Two of those Spann wins were accomplished only by excellent relief chores of Andy Karl.

Whenever Spann started to go badly during the recent Western jaunt, coach Johnny Cooney, himself a one-time great southpaw, noted that he was striding too far on his follow-through step. So Cooney and Mgr. Billy Southworth had Spann concentrate on shortening his step. As a result, he twirled magnificent ball against the Cards in his last start.

The Braves face a crafty southpaw tonight. Kennedy had the Tribe helpless the last time he faced them in New York. It was in this game that Earl Torgeson fanned four times.

From what we saw of the Giants yesterday, this outfit, which stepped into first place as a result of its win over the Braves, are likely to remain there for some time unless the Tribe can tip them over in the next three games for they return home after the local series and have a long stay before them. With the chummy right field fence at the Polo Grounds and home atmosphere, not to overlook morning practice, those Giants are going to be tough to knock out of the present fight.

They are beginning to get good pitching. Larry Jansen, Kennedy, Dave Koslo, Ken Trinkle and Bill Voiselle together with some lesser lights should gather plenty of home wins.

Local fans had a chance to see Jansen yesterday. They saw too much. This 30-game winner for Lefty O'Doul's Frisco Seals last year is a real pitcher. He has a most effective slider. He can shoot a fast ball and pull the string on his change ball. Altogether, Larry is smart, too. He was constantly ahead of the batter. Of course, he was well helped up by veteran Walker Cooper behind the bat.

Jansen made a deep impression on the small gathering as he rolled to an 8-1 win.

While Larry was breezing, the Boston pitchers were having a terrible time. First came Si Johnson, then Ed Wright, followed by Johnny Beasley and Glen Elliott. Elliott apparently hasn't fully recovered from his recent attack of grip.

One of the bright features of the Boston pitching efforts was the flash of his 42 speed by Beazley, when he twirled for the Cards and took two games from the Yankees in the World Series. The Nashville right-hander was a bit wild in one inning, but, in his second and final stanza, he showed some old Beazley stuff.

It would be all right for Boston fans if Johnny Mize returned to his St. Louis home and stayed there. Boston fans, as well as local pitchers, want no part of this murderous hitter. All he did yesterday was pump a grand slam homer off Johnson in the third. This ruined the afternoon for the local fans.

Jansen Once in Red Sox Fold; Freed by Landis

Larry Jansen who blinded the Braves yesterday with his bewildering stuff should now be wearing a Red Sox uniform instead of Giant regalia.

The Red Sox once owned Jansen and had him covered up at Salt Lake City. The late Judge K. M. Landis got wind of the cover up and declared Jansen a free agent.

Jansen accepted a fat bonus to sign with Lefty O'Doul's San Francisco Seals. When war was declared Jansen who owns a substantial farm in Forest Grove, Ore., was listed as a farmer and was free from the armed service. After the war he joined Frisco. The Giants had effected a working agreement with Frisco which gave the latter its choice of any player on that club. Naturally, Mel Ott picked Jansen who won 30 games and lost six for Frisco for the year.

It is very apparent that Braves pitchers need plenty of work. There is nothing that can be done about it except to provide some seasonable weather so the men can reach some semblance of rotation duty on the hill. Jansen happened to come up with a sweet game and his efforts made the Tribal pitchers look feeble. But tonight Spann and Kennedy should put on a good show. Tickets are available for tomorrow's twin bill with the Giants, as well as tonight's game.

A pre-game reunion between two old Boston greats failed to provide the lucky charm for the Braves. Lefty George Tyler and his battery mate Hank Gowdy of the famous Braves 1914 team shot the breeze before the game. Bill Rigney, the Giants' third sacker, catches pop flies and fouls a lot like Rabbit Maranville's vest pocket catch. Mel Ott has two wise heads on the coaching lines. Stoney Jackson at third and Red Kress at first. A dash of a Fourth of July married-unmarried men's game was injected into the third. With Torgy on second and one out, Si Johnson popped a foul near the Giant bench. Both Mize and Jansen dashed after it. Jansen caught it but Mize's foot tripped Larry. He fell but held the ball. Meanwhile, Torgy tagged up and went to third. Walker Cooper snatched the ball out of Jansen's hand and pegged poorly to third. The ball rolled into foul territory and Jansen scored, a real gift. Seldom happens but seldom detected. Johnny Kerr attempted a double-play from Jansen. Johnny stepped over the second base bag, grabbed the ball and pegged out Sisti at first. But he failed to touch second and Umpire Jocko Conlon on top of the play called it right. . . .

REYNOLDS SITS IN CLUBHOUSE CORNER ALONE DESPITE REPEATING 2-HITTER OVER SOX

NEW YORK, May 24—What a difference one month can make! On April 23, after Alie Reynolds had blanked the Sox, 2-0, with two hits (both by York), reporters from 20 different papers and magazines thronged the Yankees clubhouse to get his life story.

"I'm one-eighty Creek . . . yes, I played the backfield for Oklahoma A. & M., . . . I was 18 games for Cleveland in '45 . . . I threw sliders all day because I couldn't control my curve . . . If it wasn't for Joe DiMaggio, I'd still be with Cleveland, and Red Embree would be here."

He was in the clubhouse a half-hour after his team-mates had departed. He was mobbed by autograph seekers on his way home.

On May 23, he repeated his two-hit performance against the Sox and won, 9-0, yet not a creature was stirring in the clubhouse after the game, not even a mouse.

Reynolds sat in his undershirt before showering. He was reading a letter. No reporters around to jot down every little item in detail. No cameramen asking him for "just one more."

It was just one of those things, it seemed. It's the old, old story of asking "who finished second?" Nobody knows, nobody seems to care. Who was the second Atlantic solo flyer after Lindbergh?

Reynolds had done it once. Second time wasn't news. Yet, in the intervening month he'd lost three games. This was his fourth victory, his third shut-out. Somebody likes him, but not the Sox.

"I didn't throw nearly as many sliders as I did in my last game," (with the Sox) he said. "I depended almost entirely on my fast ball. It was alive warming up, and my curve was sharp. Why resort to trick pitches when you've got your stuff?"

"My control was excellent.

I threw only a few curves, broke them over the plate neatly, then shoved the curve in my hip pocket. The Sox had seen it. I kept them looking for it. I just kept throwing fast balls which had something on them."

It was an easy game, he said. "Any game is easy when your side gets you some runs," he admitted. "Kind of bloopy hits they got at that, weren't they?" he said matter-of-factly.

Matter of fact, they were. Goodman pinch hit for Dorish in the sixth and got a handle hit to shallow center field. Tebbetts hit a grounder in the eighth that took a weird hop, hit third baseman Bobby Brown on the shoulder and bounded toward second. No play was possible.

"I was lucky just the same," Reynolds said. "You've got to be lucky to pitch a shutout. They hit some balls good. Mele, for example. I'm estimated to win, but feel better over the shutout."

He took his shower in comparative silence. The Yankee dressing room is so large it doesn't lend to huddles or college cheers. But off in the distance a voice arose: "We win two in a row, lippie! Let's have more revuls."

Red Sox Weak at Plate; Only Ted, Mele Hitting

By HERB FINNEGAN

NEW YORK, May 24—Ferriss, Hughson and Dobson pitch for the Red Sox in the three games remaining with the Yankees here. They are the "big three" of the A. L. champions' mound staff. Yet, they'll do well to capture one game of this series of four if the Red Sox do not pick up in their hitting.

Oh, it's not that the Sox were held to two hits again and blanked, 9-0, by Allie Reynolds in the opener here. One game doesn't make a season. They just haven't been hitting a lick all spring. That is, for the Red Sox.

Power and Red Sox have been synonymous for years. Not in '47. They've played 36 games, and in 20 of those games have been held to nine hits or less. They're not having those big innings they enjoyed in the fond yesteryear. They're not hitting as a team. One player will have a good day now, another a good day then, but they don't tie them together as of yore.

"Give us a week of warm weather, and we'll be all right," say the Sox. Warm weather doesn't help too much on the road because visitors get only a half hour's batting practice daily. And this is a long road trip, gentlemen. Nineteen games left to be played on foreign terrain.

The Sox were weak in the West, for example, they won only 21 games while losing 23 last year. They won their pennant at Fenway Park where they took 61 of 77 games. They're not winning it at home this year. On their recent stay, they won 7.

That's good, but not good enough to atone for their traveling deficiencies. And, with the type of pitching the Sox have been getting, it's strictly up to the hitters to produce the runs.

Bobby Doerr has made one hit in his last 33 trips. He's the No. 5 batter, the man who should be challenging for the League RBI lead. Pesky has made two hits in his last 17 trips. He's a .330 hitter, as he's proved in the past. York has made 3 hits in 16. He's the No. 4 hitter, an RBI championship threat like Doerr. Dom DiMaggio is 2 in 18, Pellagrini 2 in 15.

So, it's not only Reynolds who is handcuffing them, nor is it only on the road that they don't hit.

Williams and Mele have done well all season. But they can't do it alone. Let Williams beat a club with a homer, as he beat St. Louis and Detroit recently and the opposition will pass him every time the Sox have a chance to get a run. He's been walked 41 times in the 20 games the Sox have played, and it's a tribute to his greatness that in half the AB's of the other players, he's still able to lead the league in home runs and RBIs.

"Take care of Pesky and Williams, and you have nothing to worry about," the Cards said last fall. They took good care of both and won the series.

At least, the Cards pitched to Williams. That's more than A. L. clubs will do after reading about Williams' game-winning home run off Trucks last Monday.

Reynolds walked him three times as he won, 9-0. Wouldn't give him anything good to hit in the sixth with one man aboard and enjoying a 5-0 lead, not even in the 9th as lead-off man in the inning with the score 9-0.

"He'll hit my pitch or he won't hit at all," said Reynolds frankly. That will be the slogan all around the league henceforth, you may be sure.

If Williams doesn't get a chance to hit, freshman Sam Mele can't do it alone. The rest of the Sox must start hitting at once or this long, long trail will be, shall we say, lachrymose.

Think Moses or Culberson could help matters if they played daily? They hit while they were in there.

Garden-Arena Votes $3 Dividend to Stockholders

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Boston Garden-Arena Corp., held in the offices of the corporation yesterday, a dividend of three dollars ($3.00) per share was voted on the common stock of the corporation, to stockholders of record at the close of business, May 23, 1947, payable on May 29, 1947.

DI MAG, KELLER QUELLED REVOLT

NEW YORK, May 24—Putting the good of the team ahead of personal grievances, Joe DiMaggio and Charlie Keller squelched suggestions for an open revolt by the Yankees before Wednesday's night game with Detroit, an employee of the club said today.

At the same time Yankee President Larry MacPhail denied that "promotion stunts" were responsible for the rumors which started because of fines levied against the two veteran stars and three other players.

Angered by the fines, several members of the team, it is said, proposed refusing to take the field against the Tigers.

When the plan for what would have amounted to a general strike was suggested, Joe and Charlie were vigorously against it. Supported by other players who were fined—catcher Aaron Robinson, outfielder Johnny Lindell and pitcher Don Johnson—they refused to disappoint the nearly 50,000 fans who had turned out for the contest.

"Washing our dirty linen in public will do no good either for the team or for baseball," DiMaggio is reported to have said. "Let's go out and win this one for the homefolks instead."

Queried about their part in preventing a sitdown protest, neither DiMaggio nor Keller would admit that it was true. They also denied knowledge that any future action is being contemplated by members of the team in protest against the fines.

Birdie's Pep Will Give Sox Lift

NEW YORK, May 24—From the press coop, it looked as if Reynolds had a three-bitter. In the second inning, Pellagrini bunted smartly to McQuinn. He raced down the line like a deerfoot. Reynolds, remarkably fast afout (he pinch runs for the Yanks), caught shoulder-to-shoulder with Pelly. "I had him beaten," said Pelly, and he put up such a squawk you knew he wasn't lying. First time he ever beefed. When you see guys like DiMaggio, Doerr, York or Pelly in a rage, you know they deserve a hearing. Not Tebbetts, however, there's a born ribber, a smart receiver. He'll help the Sox, because they need aggressiveness.

McQuinn's toss as he raced

Tebbetts had made only five hits in Detroit flannels before he joined the Sox. He almost made two against Reynolds. Before his single, he lined sharply to the fancy-fielding Henrich, a well-hit ball. . . . In the fifth inning, he made a glove-hand pickup of Mele's wide-of-the-plate throw so nonchalantly you'd think he was catching batting practice. His error was a wide throw to third after a Farnell (Dorish's relief) wild pitch. . . . Tebbetts' philosophy: "We were licked the only way to be licked. Just overpowered. It's losing the close ones that give you ulcers." Tebbetts, incidentally, was the only Sox to reach third.

Dorish pitched expertly until he had two out in the fifth. "Looks like a scoreless game," said N. Y. reporters who came over to get Dorish's life story. Then Reynolds doubled. Stirrweiss and Henrich singled and Keller lofted his ninth homer—four runs. The life story questions were stopped abruptly.

Let it be stated in Dorish's favor that Keller's home run was a joke. It was a high fly to right that traveled only 310 feet. Mele made a vain lunge for it as it fell into the stands. Last series here, Keller hit two 450-foot drives to deep, deep center that DiMaggio turned into putouts. . . . Batting averages never will be honest until parks are standardized. . . . Dorish has been at bat 12 times this season, has made one hit and fanned seven times. . . . Reynolds is the first pitcher to beat the Sox twice this year. . . . Pellagrini and Williams got their signals crossed on a fly ball that gave Keller a cheap double, but no run scored. . . . Williams muffed Henrich's fly in the first, but forced Stirrweiss at second. . . . Pellagrini grini made sparkling plays on Joe Di Mag in the first (starting a Dip) on McQuinn in the fourth. If the club was hitting, he'd be an all-star candidate. As it is, Al Brancato (former A's) may be brought up from Louisville to bolster the Sox attack. Brancato played shortstop for the A's before the war, is playing third for Louisville. . . .

Cleveland took three straight from the Yanks and said they looked like a second division club. Maybe, but against the Sox the Yanks play like the Yanks of the Ruth-Gehrig era. . . . Stirrweiss' three hits jumped him from 200 to 224. . . . Keller is batting only .226 but he has nine home runs and leads the club in RBIs with 22. . . . Ferriss and Chandler, today's pitchers and 20-game winners last year, have 23 records. . . . NY writers say Red Sox is the win pennant, say Hughson is the best pitcher in the league, say their own club will finish fourth.

GROVELAND—Postponed from Thursday because of inclement weather, the midget auto drivers will be returning to the Pines Speedway here tonight for an eight race program, scheduled to start at 7:45 under the floodlights.

The track, located two miles outside Haverhill, will be attracting top flight drivers such as Joe Sostilio, Natick, and Bob Blair, Dedham, whose cracked-up car has been rushed through with repairs for a return engagement.

The largest field of competitors in State Meet history—a grand total of 738-individuals from 63 schools in the two classes of competition—battled for Class A and B championships today at Dickinson Stadium, Newton, for the final time before stepping into a new phase of interscholastic sports.

Hereafter, the State event will be split into three divisions and Detroit increased its first place advantage to a game and a half by whipping Chicago, 5-2, in the opener of a 25-game home stand. Al Benton, making his first starting appearance of the season, scattered seven White Sox hits to gain his second win of the week. Paul Mullin boosted his leading average to .363 with a single and double in four trips, contributing to the defeat of starter Joe Haynes.

Lesnevich's Right Hand Mesmerizes Bettina

NEW YORK, May 24 (AP)—Jimmy Grippo is a magician and a fight manager, and on occasion he has combined the two to hypnotize Melio Bettina for some of his fights. But at his best, Jimmy never did a mesmerizing job on Melio like Gus Lesnevich did with a right hand last night in Madison Square Garden.

Now, this is no argument against the old look-me-in-the-eye routine of hypnosis as opposed to the right-hand-shot-on-the-whiskers system, but the fact remains that the world light-heavyweight champion applied the sleep-maker on the ex-champ in exactly 59 seconds of the first round of his scheduled ten-rounder this time. And while rocky-poly Melio may not have been hypnotized in the accepted sense, no one is ever going to say he wasn't asleep. Particularly no one in the crowd of 10,225 who paid $51.143 to see the mesmerism applied by Gus with three roof-caving-in knock-downs.

As a matter of fact, before he fully recovered, it took a full half-hour of treatment and a shot of the pieces back in the proper order.
